

The FLAG

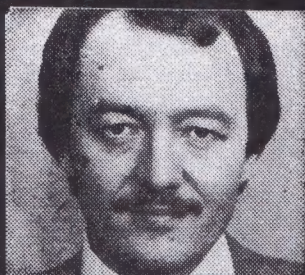

FREEDOM, TRUTH & JUSTICE

Time Running Out On Tony Blair's

DO NOTHING GOVERNMENT

SKINNER

LIVINGSTONE

ABBOTT

HE SAID THAT HIS GOVERNMENT WOULD "HIT THE GROUND RUNNING" and in the first few days there were a number of steps taken such as letting the Bank of England sets its own interest rates and the announcement of an 'ethical' foreign policy. But now after only six months the sham is starting to show through while the hard left are starting to flex their muscles. The real changes that the British people thought they were voting for are disappearing like mist in the morning and all that is left is a rag tag of policies and his inane grin.

CRIME

"Tough on crime - tough on the causes of crime" that was the promise in their manifesto. So far all that we have seen is a really silly measure that says that it is far more serious to mug someone for a racial motive than for theft. Not only is this ludicrous as far as the victim is concerned, but it will clog up our courts even more. Once someone is found guilty, the court will then have to deliberate further to examine the motive of the offender - instead of just bashing them away to protect society.

No other measures have been brought in to deal with confidence among both Nationalist and Unionist traditions". Sinn Fein/IRA are invited into talks without a single bullet having been handed in and Gerry Adams bluntly stating that a "united Ireland" was "inevitable", and that he would not be diverted from securing "an end to British jurisdiction" - how exactly does this inspire trust and confidence amongst Unionists who are increasingly accepting that just as in the early part of this century their future will only be secured by fighting for it.

rectors should be reasonable"

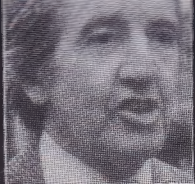

Meanwhile New Labour intends to grab lottery money to help bale it out over funding of health and education projects. So instead of new, worthwhile projects being funded the money will be treated a just another form of government revenue.

IMMIGRATION

"All (immigration) applications should be dealt with speedily and fairly".

Immigration officials estimate there may be upto 100,000 immigrants in this country who have been let in but who may not be entitled to be here and have cases outstanding. Meanwhile purely illegal immigrants are flooding through the Channel Tunnel and now the immigration service is to be cut back by a whopping 25%.

On issues such as education and Europe there is so little change from the Tories it is almost unbelievable.

SKINNER

LIVINGSTONE

ABBOTT

HE SAID THAT HIS GOVERNMENT WOULD "HIT THE GROUND RUNNING" and in the first few days there were a number of steps taken such as letting the Bank of England sets its own interest rates and the announcement of an 'ethical' foreign policy. But now after only six months the sham is starting to show through while the hard left are starting to flex their muscles. The real changes that the British people thought they were voting for are disappearing like mist in the morning and all that is left is a rag tag of policies and his inane grin.

CRIME

"Tough on crime - tough on the causes of crime" that was the promise in their manifesto. So far all that we have seen is a really silly measure that says that it is far more serious to mug someone for a racial motive than for theft. Not only is this ludicrous as far as the victim is concerned, but it will clog up our courts even more. Once someone is found guilty, the court will then have to deliberate further to examine the motive of the offender - instead of just banging them away to protect society.

No other measures have been brought in to deal with burglaries, muggings, car crime or sexual assaults. The paedophile register is a failure before it has started

THE HEALTH SERVICE

After just six months the NHS was in such a desperate state that Frank Dobson was forced to quickly find an extra £300million from other departments to stave off widespread closures and a winter crisis. The money will not reduce waiting lists - it will simply stop them from becoming longer.

Karen Caines, Director of the Institute of Health Services Management said: "Next year's real growth in funding is still less than the NHS has been used to in recent years, even after the Government's additional allocation and the prospects for 1999 look dire".

THAT DOME

Despite the above, it is to go ahead and the exhibits are already taking on a horrendously 'politically correct' tone. A peoples' archive is to be set up there. Paul Thompson a historical adviser to the project from Essex University said there will be "accounts drawn directly from ordinary people on subjects like sexual liberation, the break up of the family.....". The National Democrats believe it is more important to liberate an elderly person from the pain suffered while waiting for hospital treatment.

CLEAN UP POLITICS

Or should this have been "Clean up in politics" as scandal after scandal has struck the Labour party. Bribery in Glasgow; Harassment and sexual innuendo in Scotland; Vote rigging in any number of branches.

One of the headlines in their manifesto said: "Decisions should be taken as near to local communities as possible". Yet when their Walsall Branch took this to mean what it said, they were suspended from membership. If it meant what it said then Labour would take Britain out of the EU tomorrow....and pigs would fly the day after.

ULSTER

"Labour will help build trust and confidence among both Nationalist and Unionist traditions". Sinn Fein/IRA are invited into talks without a single bullet having been handed in and Gerry Adams bluntly stating that a "united Ireland" was "inevitable", and that he would not be diverted from securing "an end to British jurisdiction" - how exactly does this inspire trust and confidence amongst Unionists who are increasingly accepting that just as in the early part of this century their future will only be secured by fighting for it.

TRANSPORT

"A sustainable environment requires above all an effective and integrated transport policy at national, regional and local level"

So far there has been precious little sign of this. All we have actually had is more bashing of the motorist with higher petrol prices and a cutback in new road schemes, with not one single improvement in our railway network has been made. In a report in August it was shown that rail travel in Britain is the most expensive in the world. The average cost of a 120 mile second class ticket in the U.K. is £32. The world average is £10.50.

An integrated transport scheme needs rail fares to be brought down - dramatically and the rail network taken back into public ownership. New Labour will do neither!

THE LOTTERY

April 1997 Manifesto: "When the current contract runs out, Labour will seek an efficient not-for-profit operator"

July 1997: Heritage Secretary, Chris Smith says: "the nature of the returns to the operator including to its directors should be reasonable"

Meanwhile New Labour intends to grab lottery money to help bale it out over funding of health and education projects. So instead of new, worthwhile projects being funded the money will be treated a just another form of government revenue.

IMMIGRATION

"All (immigration) applications should be dealt with speedily and fairly".

Immigration officials estimate there may be upto 100,000 immigrants in this country who have been let in but who may not be entitled to be here and have cases outstanding. Meanwhile purely illegal immigrants are flooding through the Channel Tunnel and now the immigration service is to be cut back by a whopping 25%.

On issues such as education and Europe there is so little change from the Tories it is almost unbelievable. However all this may change - but not necessarily for the better.

The National Executive Committee elections for the Labour party gave an indication of the likely future direction of the government. They were:

Robin Cook	118,726
David Blunkett	106,601
Mo Mowlam	105,717
Dennis Skinner	100,268
Ken Livingstone	83,669
Harriet Harman	80,498
Diane Abbott	76,772

This is a clear indication of a resurgent hard left. It is unlikely that they will put up for very much longer with Tony Blair's liberal-Tory policies. In some areas they may even press for improvements, as in the health service. But with the hard left there is always a price to pay in terms of loss of freedom and in cost as they attempt to re-form a centrally directed economy.

Tony Blair's honeymoon with the British people may be just starting to come to an end. The Uxbridge by-election was a shock to New Labour. Perhaps the biggest single factor that

FIND OUT MORE ABOUT THE NATIONAL DEMOCRATS

0181

CONTENTS
Paedophiles: Grasping the Nettle
Europe Plots the Destruction of Britain
National Democrats in the East Midlands Flogging in Saudi Arabia
Your chance to win £250
Anti-E.U. Organisations in Britain

FREEDOM, TRUTH & JUSTICE

50P

ISSN 0950-2912 ISSUE No. 99.

ING MENT

ABBOTT

DO NOTHING OPPOSITION

IN AN OPINION POLL in early October the Conservatives fell to an all time low of just 22% supporting them. William Hague's personal rating is just as bad with 27% of Tory Supporters and a pathetic 6% of the total saying that he would make the best Prime Minister out of the three party leaders.

Since becoming Tory leader his achievements include: engaging in party political squabbles over the arrangements for the funeral of the Princess of Wales, making himself look silly at the Notting Hill Carnival, slapping down Norman Tebbit's forthright views on multiculturalism and finally, refusing to rule out a future Tory gov-

D RUNNING" and in the first letting the Bank of England 'ethical' foreign policy. But through while the hard left at the British people thought morning and all that is left is

confidence among both Nationalist and Unionist traditions". Sinn Fein/IRA are invited into talks without a single bullet having been handed in and Gerry Adams bluntly stating that a "united Ireland" was "inevitable", and that he would not be diverted from securing "an end to British jurisdiction" - how exactly does this inspire trust and confidence amongst Unionists who are increasingly accepting that just as in the early part of this century their future will only be secured by fighting for it.

rectors should be reasonable" Meanwhile New Labour intends to grab lottery money to help bale it out over funding of health and education projects. So instead of new, worthwhile projects being funded the money will be treated a just another form of government revenue.

IMMIGRATION

"All (immigration) applications should be dealt with speedily and fairly".

Immigration officials estimate there may be upto 100,000 immigrants in this country who have been let in but who may not be entitled to be here and have cases outstanding. Meanwhile purely illegal immigrants are flooding through the Channel Tunnel and now the immigration service is to be cut back by a whopping 25%.

On issues such as education and Europe there is so little change from the Tories it is almost unbelievable. However all this may change - but

TRANSPORT

D RUNNING" and in the first s letting the Bank of England n 'ethical' foreign policy. But w through while the hard left at the British people thought morning and all that is left is confidence among both Nationalist and Unionist traditions". Sinn Fein/IRA are invited into talks without a single bullet having been handed in and Gerry Adams bluntly stating that a "united Ireland" was "inevitable", and that he would not be diverted from securing "an end to British jurisdiction" - how exactly does this inspire trust and confidence amongst Unionists who are increasingly accepting that just as in the early part of this century their future will only be secured by fighting for it.

TRANSPORT

"A sustainable environment requires above all an effective and integrated transport policy at national, regional and local level"

So far there has been precious little sign of this. All we have actually had is more bashing of the motorist with higher petrol prices and a cutback in new road schemes, with not one single improvement in our railway network has been made. In a report in August it was shown that rail travel in Britain is the most expensive in the world. The average cost of a 120 mile second class ticket in the U.K. is £32. The world average is £10.50.

An integrated transport scheme needs rail fares to be brought down - dramatically and the rail network taken back into public ownership. New Labour will do neither!

THE LOTTERY

April 1997 Manifesto: "When the current contract runs out, Labour will seek an efficient not-for-profit operator"

July 1997: Heritage Secretary, Chris Smith says: "the nature of the returns to the operator including to its directors should be reasonable" Meanwhile New Labour intends to grab lottery money to help bale it out over funding of health and education projects. So instead of new, worthwhile projects being funded the money will be treated as just another form of government revenue.

IMMIGRATION

"All (immigration) applications should be dealt with speedily and fairly".

Immigration officials estimate there may be up to 100,000 immigrants in this country who have been let in but who may not be entitled to be here and have cases outstanding. Meanwhile purely illegal immigrants are flooding through the Channel Tunnel and now the immigration service is to be cut back by a whopping 25%.

On issues such as education and Europe there is so little change from the Tories it is almost unbelievable. However all this may change - but not necessarily for the better.

The National Executive Committee elections for the Labour party gave an indication of the likely future direction of the government. They were:

Robin Cook	118,726
David Blunkett	106,601
Mo Mowlam	105,717
Dennis Skinner	100,268
Ken Livingstone	83,669
Harriet Harman	80,498
Diane Abbott	76,772

This is a clear indication of a resurgent hard left. It is unlikely that they will put up for very much longer with Tony Blair's liberal-Tory policies. In some areas they may even press for improvements, as in the health service. But with the hard left there is always a price to pay in terms of loss of freedom and in cost as they attempt to re-form a centrally directed economy.

Tony Blair's honeymoon with the British people may be just starting to come to an end. The Uxbridge by-election was a shock to New Labour. Perhaps the biggest single factor that

IN AN OPINION POLL in early October the Conservatives fell to an all time low of just 22% supporting them. William Hague's personal rating is just as bad with 27% of Tory Supporters and a pathetic 6% of the total saying that he would make the best Prime Minister out of the three party leaders.

Since becoming Tory leader his achievements include: engaging in party political squabbles over the arrangements for the funeral of the Princess of Wales, making himself look silly at the Notting Hill Carnival, slapping down Norman Tebbit's forthright views on multiculturalism and finally, refusing to rule out a future Tory government taking Britain into a single European currency.

The first two of these can be put down to a level of political immaturity. The second two indicate his future political plans for the Conservative Party.

All that Lord Tebbit said was: "Our country is being dismembered, our right to govern ourselves abridged - society is literally disintegrating. Our inner cities are rife with crime, violence, disorder vice and yobishness. Drug abuse is widespread. Fraud is too easily tolerated"....and whose fault is this, Lord Tebbit - well, it's your party that has been running the country for the past 17 years.

He went on: "Unless we share standards, moral values, language and our national heritage we will constitute neither a society nor a nation - multiculturalism is a divisive force. One cannot uphold two sets of ethics or be loyal to two nations".

He warned Britain could become anew "Yugoslavia".

What was William Hague's reaction; he said: "We live in a multicultural society.....there is no place for bigotry in my Conservative Party".

On Europe Hague has also been doing verbal somersaults; he has refused to permanently rule out the Conservatives taking Britain into a single currency, nor even to rule it out for 10 years as some Tories wanted.

Hague's ideal is for Labour to take Britain in and then, in true Tory style, he will be able to avoid the problem
Contd. Page 4, Col 1.

E ABOUT EMOCRATS

0181 471-6872

Britain has the worst pensions in Europe

According to a recent survey British pensioners are amongst the worst off in Europe. In a comparison between the average wage and the average pension Britain comes 13th out of 14 European countries. Only former Communist country Finland comes below us.

In Germany a pensioner can expect to receive 94% of the average wage in their pension. In Belgium it is 86%, in Holland 82%, In Sweden 81%, in Southern Ireland it is 84% while in Britain it is just 77%.

Pensioners' Rights campaigner Jack Jones said: "In terms of payments we make to the elderly, we are the meanest country in Europe."

What next? Buying Soldiers from Italy?

Britain's last factory to make military high explosive, the Royal Ordnance at Bridgwater, Somerset is about to be taken over by an Anglo French Company - and then closed down. All future operations would then be based in France.

Britain would then be dependent on foreign sources for all its high explosive. Just how dangerous this could be was demonstrated during the Gulf War when Belgium refused to supply Britain with howitzer shells because it opposed Britain's involvement in the war.

It is surely only a question of time before E.U. regulations make it mandatory to advertise jobs in the Army throughout Europe - and then we could end up with the British Army made up of Italians, Germans, Belgians and Turks.

East Midlands National Dem Activities - Elections - Soc

Picture Captions

Top Left: An election canvassing team prepare for a long day's work.

Middle Left: Regional Organiser: Graham Hardy relaxes with his wife Heather at last year's Christmas Dinner

Bottom Left: Other party members also enjoyed the party's Christmas dinner which was held in Derby. Dennis Monk chatting with Caroline Ebbs, the wife of the party's Deputy Chairman

Top Right: Adtranz "down-sizing" their operation at the former Carriage & Wagon works in Derby.

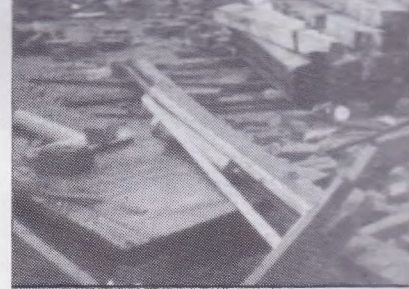

Bottom Right: The former British Rail Research and Engineering

Britain's last factory to make military high explosive, the Royal Ordnance at Bridgwater, Somerset is about to be taken over by an Anglo French Company - and then closed down. All future operations would then be based in France.

Britain would then be dependent on foreign sources for all its high explosive. Just how dangerous this could be was demonstrated during the Gulf War when Belgium refused to supply Britain with howitzer shells because it opposed Britain's involvement in the war.

It is surely only a question of time before E.U. regulations make it mandatory to advertise jobs in the Army throughout Europe - and then we could end up with the British Army made up of Italians, Germans, Belgians and Turks.

Picture Captions

Top Left: An election canvassing team prepare for a long day's work.

Middle Left: Regional Organiser: Graham Hardy relaxes with his wife Heather at last year's Christmas Dinner

Bottom Left: Other party members also enjoyed the party's Christmas dinner which was held in Derby. Dennis Monk chatting with Caroline Ebbs, the wife of the party's Deputy Chairman

Top Right: Adtranz "down-sizing" their operation at the former Carriage & Wagon works in Derby.

Bottom Right: The former British Rail Research and Engineering works in London Road, Derby

Church of England gets it wrong again

The latest piece of idiocy to come out of the Church of England concerns the marriage service. Not content with encouraging homosexual marriages it has now turned its attentions to the more normal heterosexual marriage service. The Church's hierarchy has decided that it is "demeaning" for the bride to be escorted down the aisle by her father. It has decided that there is some implication that the father regards his daughter as a chattel to be given away.

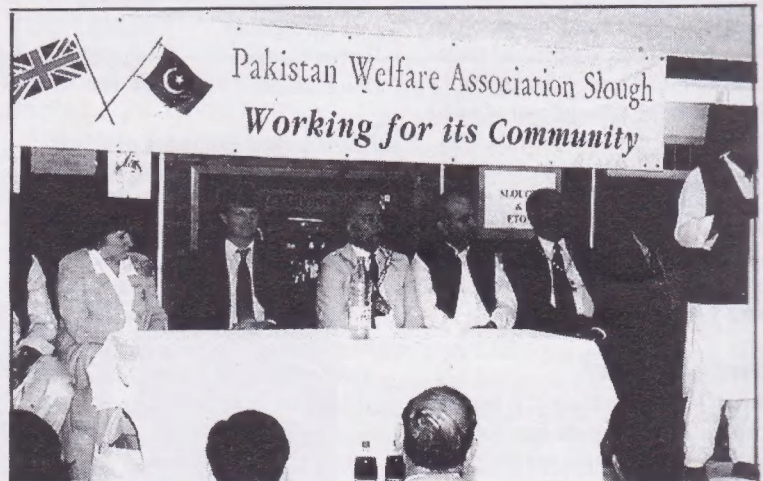

It has decided to do away with this piece of symbolism. Yet it is this piece of symbolism that many find to be one of the most attractive and memorable parts of the service. A bride enters the Church with her father who has helped to bring her up and who has loved her from being a baby to becoming a woman. Now she is taking her life in her hands and will, after the service, walk back down the aisle with her husband. The Church of England has got it wrong again.

Ritually Slaughtered Meat For School Dinners

IN THE LAST Issue of The Flag the subject of ritually slaughtered meat was raised on the front page. At the end of August in Slough, Councillor Nazar Lodhi (Lab) made a passionate speech at a gathering to celebrate the 50th Anniversary of Pakistan. He said: "We have had problems with Berks, they have not been helpful. But when we become a unitary authority, I promise you, in every school Halal meat will be provided

Nazar Lodhi: Labour Councillor wants halal meat on school menus

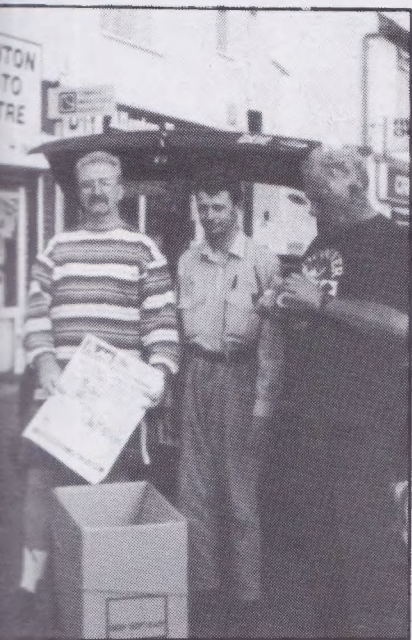

Councillor Lodhi then pointed to Slough's new Director of Education John Christie and said: "Do not embarrass me when I come back next year, this is something we have to do."

Later Mr. Christie said that although there was a contract with a private firm for school meals which did not provide for ritually slaughtered meat, he said he would be "consulting with parents and the community to find the best way to renegotiate this contract".

Because Halal meat can only be slaughtered under Muslim direction any such new contract would have to be awarded to a Muslim firm - thus precluding any non-Muslim firm from tendering for the contract. It is thought unlikely that the Commission for Racial Equality will be taking up this matter.

Midlands National Democrats Activities - Elections - Socials

Picture Captions

Top Left: An election canvassing team prepare for a long day's work.

Middle Left: Regional Organiser: Graham Hardy relaxes with his wife Heather at last year's Christmas Dinner

Bottom Left: Other party members also enjoyed the party's Christmas dinner which was held in Derby. Dennis Monk chatting with Caroline Ebbs, the wife of the party's Deputy Chairman

Top Right: Adtranz "down-sizing" their operation at the former Carriage & Wagon works in Derby.

Bottom Right: The former British Rail Research and Engineering

THE EAST MIDLANDS REGION of the National Democrats has been one of the fastest growing regions of the party. From a small start in Derby the party now has branches in Derby, Burton on Trent and Leicester and sub-Branchees in Northampton and Nottingham.

The active team of members has been able to point to the industrial devastation that has befallen parts of the region which has been especially hit by the lunacy of successive governments in privatising and running down the country's rail network. At the same time population pressure has meant more and more encroachments onto green areas as new housing is required.

A combination of government and local incompetence and failure has badly dented the region's health services - in short the region is suffering all the faults and problems that

How to spot a firm going broke

Bill Mackey a retired "corporate undertaker" has set out 17 signs of imminent corporate collapse.

They include:-

- ✱ The Chairman being named by the Government in the honours list

- ✱ Having new offices being opened by the Prime Minister

- ✱ Being awarded the Queens Award to Industry

- ✱ Having a Chairman who is a politician

In other words if the political establishment approves of you - then you are about to go bust.

Racist Thugs run riot on harmony weekend

Liverpool City Council and the police have set up a £10,000 experiment aimed at turning racist thugs into model citizens. All very laudable, but the reality was not quite what the organisers intended.

Instead of giving these hooligans a stiff dose of prison, they were sent on a holiday to a four bedroom cottage in Snowdonia. There they were meant to take part in therapy sessions and seminars on social harmony organised by social workers. Instead they hurled abuse at them and squirted them with shaving foam.

WPC Karen Austin, the community liaison officer said: "It did not go as planned.....we came back early because we were going nowhere".

So, another £10,000 down the drain on the fantasy of a social worker, which is apparently being studied by academics from Berlin University.

Abortions rise by another 8%

The number of abortions carried out last year rose by 8% over the previous year. However the number of abortions carried out on young girls, some as young as 11, has risen by a much greater 15%.

Mrs Teresa Noble, the Havering Branch Secretary of the Society for the Protection of the Unborn Child said: "This news is a sad indication of people's attitudes today and their abortion mentality. We have brought this all on

Picture Captions

Top Left: An election canvassing team prepare for a long day's work.

Middle Left: Regional Organiser: Graham Hardy relaxes with his wife Heather at last year's Christmas Dinner

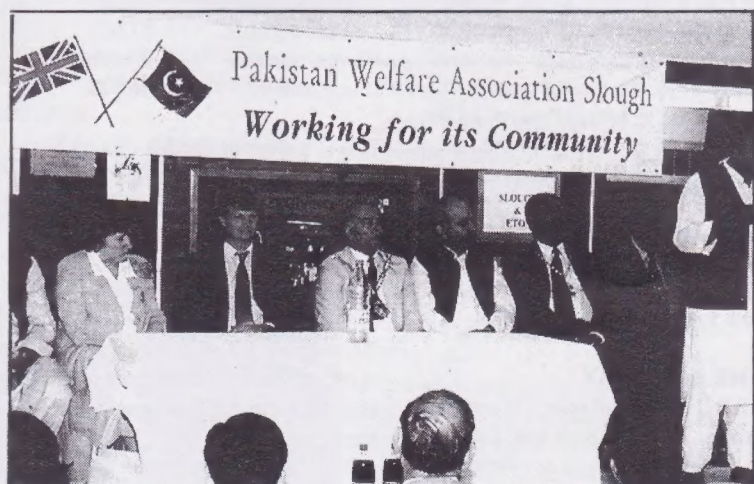

Bottom Left: Other party members also enjoyed the party's Christmas dinner which was held in Derby. Dennis Monk chatting with Caroline Ebbs, the wife of the party's Deputy Chairman

Top Right: Adtranz "down-sizing" their operation at the former Carriage & Wagon works in Derby.

Bottom Right: The former British Rail Research and Engineering works in London Road, Derby

ly Slaughtered Meat r School Dinners

g the meat t the ncil-pascel-Parob-been uni-in pro-

Councillor Lodhi then pointed to Slough's new Director of Education John Christie and said: "Do not embarrass me when I come back next year, this is something we have to do."

Later Mr. Christie said that although there was a contract with a private firm for school meals which did not provide for ritually slaughtered meat, he said he would be "consulting with parents and the community to find the best way to renegotiate this contract".

Because Halal meat can only be slaughtered under Muslim direction any such new contract would have to be awarded to a Muslim firm - thus precluding any non-Muslim firm from tendering for the contract. It is thought unlikely that the Commission for Racial Equality will be taking up this matter.

THE EAST MIDLANDS REGION of the National Democrats has been one of the fastest growing regions of the party. From a small start in Derby the party now has branches in Derby, Burton on Trent and Leicester and sub-Branchees in Northampton and Nottingham.

The active team of members has been able to point to the industrial devastation that has befallen parts of the region which has been especially hit by the lunacy of successive governments in privatising and running down the country's rail network. At the same time population pressure has meant more and more encroachments onto green areas as new housing is required.

A combination of government and local incompetence and failure has badly dented the region's health services - in short the region is suffering all the faults and problems that have been caused by incompetent political leadership.

The area has thus been ripe for the advent of a new voice and the National Democrats are doing that with some vigour.

The branches organise regular activities such as leafletting and hold excellent and very pleasant branch meetings. They have fully developed the social side of the party whilst not forgetting the important work. Last year they hosted the party's best ever Christmas Dinner and word of this has gone through the grapevine so that this year the initial booking has been for 50% more places.

The region has a very able and politically astute team of officials who work closely together and they currently have three members on the National Directorate: the Regional Organiser: Graham Hardy, the Burton Organiser: Keith Sharp and the Leicester Organiser: Clive Potter.

They operate a friendly form of rivalry with the West Midlands which acts to encourage both areas and helps spur them on to achieve the targets they set themselves.

As a result of all this the National Democrats in the East Midlands are openly acknowledged even by our opponents as the new rising political movement in that area and it should only be a question of time, and perhaps not too much time, before they are challenging the three main parties.

bedroom cottage in Snowdonia. There they were meant to take part in therapy sessions and seminars on social harmony organised by social workers. Instead they hurled abuse at them and squirted them with shaving foam.

WPC Karen Austin, the community liaison officer said: "It did not go as planned....we came back early because we were going nowhere".

So, another £10,000 down the drain on the fantasy of a social worker, which is apparently being studied by academics from Berlin University.

Abortions rise by another 8%

The number of abortions carried out last year rose by 8% over the previous year. However the number of abortions carried out on young girls, some as young as 11, has risen by a much greater 15%.

Mrs Teresa Noble, the Havering Branch Secretary of the Society for the Protection of the Unborn Child said: "This news is a sad indication of people's attitudes today and their abortion mentality. We have brought this all on ourselves, but it must be stopped. People have become too hard-hearted. People need education, especially the young, to show them that life is not disposable. It should be respected."

You've got to laugh

Margaret Wright, 49, went on holiday to the Gambia where she "fell in love" with local tribesman David Bojang. "I fell for him straight away" said Margaret. They were duly married locally.

After a few months they came to Britain, David as a visitor and Margaret supported him for four years. Then he was given British citizenship - 5 days later he walked out, moved to Crawley in Sussex and can now claim income support.

Margaret said: "He just used me" - there's one born every minute.

Environment Agency is environmentally unfriendly

The official government environmental watchdog is totally obsessed by "car culture" according to its own staff. It promotes its own "car leasing scheme" among almost half of its 9,000 employees.

It even encourages employees to do higher mileages by rewarding them with larger and more powerful cars. In contrast it refuses to pay any mileage allowance for the use of bicycles and does nothing to encourage their use or ownership. It has 1,715 of its own vehicles but only a handful of bicycles which are used exclusively for water bailiffs.

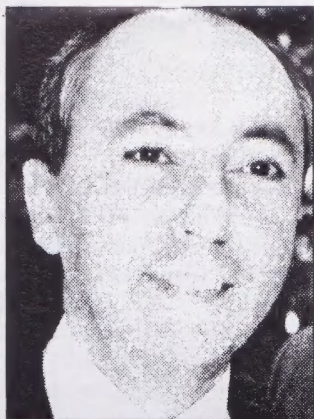

In many cases the offices of this Environment Agency are located in positions where use of the car is a virtual necessity and where travelling to work by bus or train is impossible.

Haw Bloody Haw

Oldham Council were only just stopped in time from erecting a commemorative plaque to British traitor William Joyce, better known as Lord Haw Haw.

Prior to the Second World War Joyce had lived in the town before moving to Germany from where he broadcast his infamous propaganda. Only vociferous complaints from local veterans prevented the plaque from being put up in Brompton Street - another example of how some politicians are completely out of touch with the wishes of ordinary people.

All Change in Le Pen's France

Bruno Megret

Paedophiles: Gras The Nettle

IN A RECENT PHONE-IN POLL 99% of people voted for paedophiles not to be released back into the community. Yet even paedophile rapists are frequently only sentenced to 8-10 years imprisonment, meaning that they can be out in 6-8 years and back in the same community. Paedophiles convicted of lesser offences may only be sentenced to 5-8 years imprisonment.

A 25 year old man who abducts and rapes a young girl or boy is likely to be back on the streets by the time he is 33. To get round this problem and the justifiable outcry it has caused amongst parents, the government has introduced a register under the Sex Offenders Act of 1997 - it is proving a monumental failure. In theory anyone jailed for a sex offence for more than 30 months will be entered on the register for life. If they have been jailed for 6-30 months then they will be put on the register for 10 years, if for less than six months then their name will only be on the register for 7 years.

There are two major problems with this as a solution to the problem of repeat offences by paedophiles. The first problem is that according to records that have been compiled by police authorities nearly two thirds of all convicted paedophiles have failed to even register their current address.

Harry Fletcher of the National Association of Probation Officers said: "They have simply disappeared despite our best efforts to contact them". Many paedophiles simply change their names and reappear in a new community with a new identity. In Manchester Graham Stridgeon was jailed for nine years for assaulting a 10 year old girl at his Wythenshawe flat, yet on release he was placed in a Manchester probation hostel and was free to roam the streets of that city.

In Salford Robert Jones served a prison sentence for child abuse, yet within six months of his release he was producing posters advertising his "holiday soccer camp" for young boys.

Such people will simply avoid the register in their pursuit of their own depraved form of pleasure.

The second point about the register is that it does nothing to stop a paedophile from committing a second offence - it simply makes their capture - after the event - a bit more likely. Seeing a man prosecuted and jailed for committing a sexual assault on one's daughter may be some very small consolation for the parents of the victim, but it does very little to help the victim.

One father described how his young daughter had been a happy, normal cheerful and outgoing girl until she had been sexually assaulted by a neighbour's son. After the as-

lent rape the National Democrats say that the perpetrator has caused so much misery that they have forfeited the right to live and for these most evil of all crimes the party is in favour of a restoration of the death penalty.

However for lesser crimes but ones which cause immense suffering, while the death penalty may not be appropriate, a caring society cannot simply allow such people to serve their time and then be released back into the community to commit such crimes again - and convicted paedophiles freely admit that a prison sentence does little to lessen the drive which makes them commit such crimes.

The problem is that jail is neither appropriate nor should society in general be expected to pay the cost of such incarceration.

There may however be another solution. The National Democrats would be in favour of setting up a special community for such people where they could live, work and socialise amongst themselves and live a near-normal life - however such a community would be closed, fenced in, the inmates could be electronically tagged to trigger an alarm system if they attempt to leave the community. The penalty for leaving the community would be based on the assumption that the reason for leaving was so that they could commit

Judge releases abductor to abduct

IN JANUARY 1996 David Hunter appeared before Judge Matthewman and was found guilty of SIX charges of child abduction. Admittedly David Hunter did not harm any of the children but such repeated abductions are serious crimes in their own right. Hunter had a bizarre "fetish" of wanting to photograph very young girls with balloons.

Unbelievably Judge Matthewman decided to give Mr Hunter just probation. However the police were very unhappy and immediately advised the education officials in Lincolnshire to warn all 320 schools about the activities of this man. Head teachers in the Boston area were told that he was obsessed with the Dunblane shootings and "locked in a cycle of sexual offences".

Parents were furious that such a man was free and living in their community and free to continue his trail of abductions...and sure enough that is exactly what he did.

In November he was caught enticing two young girls with money in Cleethorpes. Hunter admitted abducting a 12 year old girl and trying

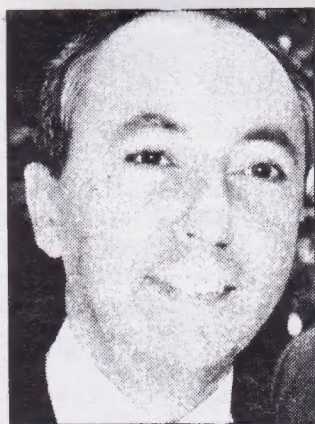

STRIDGEON
Manchester

traitor William Joyce, better known as Lord Haw Haw.

Prior to the Second World War Joyce had lived in the town before moving to Germany from where he broadcast his infamous propaganda. Only vociferous complaints from local veterans prevented the plaque from being put up in Brompton Street - another example of how some politicians are completely out of touch with the wishes of ordinary people.

All Change in Le Pen's France

Bruno Megret

Having taken control of Vitrolles in local elections Jean Marie le Pen's FN party is taking down the street names which commemorate a number of terrorists and Communists. Place Mandela has gone as has the street named after Communist Chilean President Salvadore Allende. Bruno Megret announced the changes as part of an effort to "reaffirm Vitrolle's Provençal and French identity".

More car lunacy from the DoE

In a consultation paper issued by the Department of the Environment in August it is suggested that local cars should be banned from using motorways which apparently are only intended for "strategic commercial and industrial traffic".

Yet most environmental groups (and the National Democrats) believe that it is exactly this "strategic commercial and industrial traffic" that should be attracted off the roads and back onto a more extensive, efficient and competitive rail network.

But as with most other suggestions from the Blair government it is more to do with treasury requirements than environmental concern.

them". Many paedophiles simply change their names and reappear in a new community with a new identity. In Manchester Graham Stridgeon was jailed for nine years for assaulting a 10 year old girl at his Wythenshawe flat, yet on release he was placed in a Manchester probation hostel and was free to roam the streets of that city.

In Salford Robert Jones served a prison sentence for child abuse, yet within six months of his release he was producing posters advertising his "holiday soccer camp" for young boys.

Such people will simply avoid the register in their pursuit of their own depraved form of pleasure.

The second point about the register is that it does nothing to stop a paedophile from committing a second offence - it simply makes their capture - after the event - a bit more likely. Seeing a man prosecuted and jailed for committing a sexual assault on one's daughter may be some very small consolation for the parents of the victim, but it does very little to help the victim.

One father described how his young daughter had been a happy, normal cheerful and outgoing girl until she had been sexually assaulted by a neighbour's son. After the assault she became introverted, very quiet, cut her long hair very short, refused to wear pretty dresses and did not like leaving her home. Even where the perpetrator of such a crime is punished, this does not bring back the joy and happiness of the little girl.

But if a register is of little use, then what is the alternative? For the most serious crimes of abduction and vio-

the right to live and for these most evil of all crimes the party is in favour of a restoration of the death penalty.

However for lesser crimes but ones which cause immense suffering, while the death penalty may not be appropriate, a caring society cannot simply allow such people to serve their time and then be released back into the community to commit such crimes again - and convicted paedophiles freely admit that a prison sentence does little to lessen the drive which makes them commit such crimes.

The problem is that jail is neither appropriate nor should society in general be expected to pay the cost of such incarceration.

There may however be another solution. The National Democrats would be in favour of setting up a special community for such people where they could live, work and socialise amongst themselves and live a near-normal life - however such a community would be closed, fenced in, the inmates could be electronically tagged to trigger an alarm system if they attempt to leave the community. The penalty for leaving the community would be based on the assumption that the reason for leaving was so that they could commit further offences. However if they stay in that community they can work and live in as near a normal way as they can - and society will be safe from them.

This may seem a difficult concept to bring to reality but it is a solution and the only one that has been put forward which combines some humanity with the overall priority of safeguarding our children

Judge releases abductor to abduct

IN JANUARY 1996 David Hunter appeared before Judge Matthewman and was found guilty of SIX charges of child abduction. Admittedly David Hunter did not harm any of the children but such repeated abductions are serious crimes in their own right. Hunter had a bizarre "fetish" of wanting to photograph very young girls with balloons.

Unbelievably Judge Matthewman decided to give Mr Hunter just probation. However the police were very unhappy and immediately advised the education officials in Lincolnshire to warn all 320 schools about the activities of this man. Head teachers in the Boston area were told that he was obsessed with the Dunblane shootings and "locked in a cycle of sexual offences".

Parents were furious that such a man was free and living in their community and free to continue his trail of abductions...and sure enough that is exactly what he did.

In November he was caught enticing two young girls with money in Cleethorpes. Hunter admitted abducting a 12 year old girl and trying to abduct an 11 year old girl.

He reappeared before Judge Matthewman at Nottingham Crown Court where at long last, the judge appeared to have learned his lesson. He sentenced David Hunter to five years imprisonment. However even

VANGUARD

ISSUE No. 51 OUT NOW!!

Contents Include:

Building Societies - The Great Bribe

The 1975 Common Market

Referendum - Re-visited

Employment & Women

Mo Mowlem - God Help Ulster

Edmund Burke's Legacy

Hogarth- The Father of English Painting

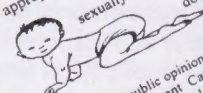

£2.00 including postage

From Vanguard Publications

P.O. Box 2269, London E6 3RF

CAPITAL PUNISHMENT OR MORE CHILD MURDER

CONVICTED PAEDOPHILES walk free weak liberal politicians prevent our courts from appropriate sentences to the pervers that prey
Time, and time again, we see paed sexually abusing children, receive "life" in spell in prison. It is doubt that when the majority of the public and ruin the

ALL recent public opinion polls show that British people want Capital Punishment Conservatives and the Liberal Democrats and are thus responsible for the release community, some even live next door DNA, genetic fingerprinting and the stage that mistakes can no longer
We are the ONLY political party plague of paedophilia that is remove people convicted of safety of our children must be No second chance

THE D

A leaflet produced by the South West
National Democrats

Paedophiles: Grasping The Nettle

99% of people voted for paedophiles not to be in the community. Yet even paedophile rapists are frequently sentenced to 5-8 years imprisonment, meaning that they can be out in the same community. Paedophiles convicted of lesser crimes and rapes a young girl or boy is likely to be back on the streets. To get round this problem and the justifiable outcry it has caused, the government has introduced a register under the Sex Offenders Act 1997. In theory anyone jailed for a sex offence will be entered on the register for life. If they have been sentenced to 10 years, if for less than 10 years they will only be on the register for 7 years.

Problems with this as a solution to the problem of repeat offences are that according to records that have been compiled over the last two thirds of all convicted paedophiles have failed to even prevent rape the National Democrats say that the perpetrator has caused so much misery that they have forfeited the right to live and for these most evil of all crimes the party is in favour of a restoration of the death penalty.

However for lesser crimes but ones which cause immense suffering, while the death penalty may not be appropriate, a caring society cannot simply allow such people to serve their time and then be released back into the community to commit such crimes again - and convicted paedophiles freely admit that a prison sentence does little to lessen the drive which makes them commit such crimes.

The problem is that jail is neither appropriate nor should society in general be expected to pay the cost of such incarceration.

There may however be another solution. The National Democrats would be in favour of setting up a special community for such people where they could live, work and socialise amongst themselves and live a near-normal life - however such a community would be closed, fenced in, the inmates could be electronically tagged to trigger an alarm system if they attempt to leave the community. The penalty for leaving the community would be based on the assumption that the reason for leaving was so that they could commit

STRIDGEON: Living in a Manchester hostel

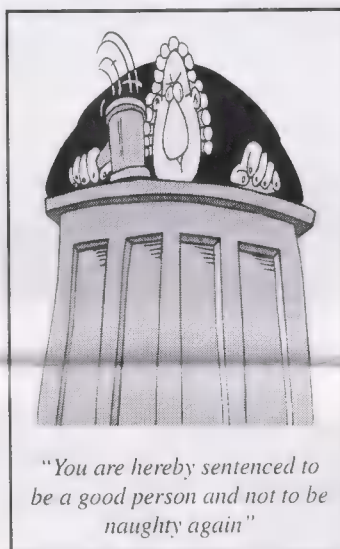

Judge releases child abductor to abduct again

IN JANUARY 1996 David Hunter appeared before Judge Matthewman and was found guilty of SIX charges of child abduction. Admittedly David Hunter did not harm any of the children but such repeated abductions are serious crimes in their own right. Hunter had a bizarre "fetish" of wanting to photograph very young girls with balloons.

Unbelievably Judge Matthewman decided to give Mr Hunter just probation. However the police were very unhappy and immediately advised the education officials in Lincolnshire to warn all 320 schools about the activities of this man. Head teachers in the Boston area were told that he was obsessed with the Dunblane shootings and "locked in a cycle of sexual offences".

Parents were furious that such a man was free and living in their community and free to continue his trail of abductions...and sure enough that is exactly what he did.

In November he was caught enticing two young girls with money in Cleethorpes. Hunter admitted abducting a 12 year old girl and trying

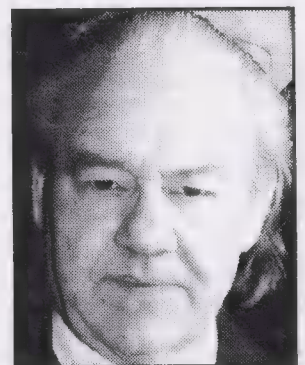

this means that he will be free within 3-4 years and quite able to continue with his "fetish" and with his obsession with the Dunblane tragedy.

This is a classic case of the problem of what to do with such people. The death penalty would be absurd - he hasn't actually physically harmed anyone, yet it is clearly extremely dangerous to release him back into the community - not least

Essex Euro Junketing

A proposed trip for seven Councillors from the London Borough of Havering to see trolley bus systems in Germany and Holland would have cost £4,000. The alternative of sending one Council officer (perhaps with a video camera) was rejected. One councillor described the proposed trip as: "a couple of days junketing at the council tax payers' expense".

Victim's Dad condemns IRA visit to Warrington

A proposal to invite Sinn Fein/IRA leaders to a conference in Warrington has been condemned by the father of 3 year old Johnathan Ball who died in the IRA bomb in that town.

The so-called Warrington-Ireland Reconciliation Enterprise (WIRE) has been thinking of staging a major conference in the town.

Wilf Ball said: "We shouldn't be asking these people to our town".

Complaints by rail users up 55%

In figures released on 18th September it was disclosed that complaints in the first three months since all routes were run by private companies had soared by 55%. A total of 2,799 complaints were received compared with 1,797 for the same period the previous year.

Complaints covered such areas as unreliable services, seat reservations, cancellations, comfort, availability of station staff, ticket office opening hours and accuracy of information from phone enquiries.

evil of all crimes the party is in favour of a restoration of the death penalty.

However for lesser crimes but ones which cause immense suffering, while the death penalty may not be appropriate, a caring society cannot simply allow such people to serve their time and then be released back into the community to commit such crimes again - and convicted paedophiles freely admit that a prison sentence does little to lessen the drive which makes them commit such crimes.

The problem is that jail is neither appropriate nor should society in general be expected to pay the cost of such incarceration.

There may however be another solution. The National Democrats would be in favour of setting up a special community for such people where they could live, work and socialise amongst themselves and live a near-normal life - however such a community would be closed, fenced in, the inmates could be electronically tagged to trigger an alarm system if they attempt to leave the community. The penalty for leaving the community would be based on the assumption that the reason for leaving was so that they could commit further offences. However if they stay in that community they can work and live in as near a normal way as they can - and society will be safe from them.

This may seem a difficult concept to bring to reality but it is a solution and the only one that has been put forward which combines some humanity with the overall priority of safeguarding our children

Judge releases child abductor to abduct again

IN JANUARY 1996 David Hunter appeared before Judge Matthewman and was found guilty of SIX charges of child abduction. Admittedly David Hunter did not harm any of the children but such repeated abductions are serious crimes in their own right. Hunter had a bizarre "fetish" of wanting to photograph very young girls with balloons.

Unbelievably Judge Matthewman decided to give Mr Hunter just probation. However the police were very unhappy and immediately advised the education officials in Lincolnshire to warn all 320 schools about the activities of this man. Head teachers in the Boston area were told that he was obsessed with the Dunblane shootings and "locked in a cycle of sexual offences".

Parents were furious that such a man was free and living in their community and free to continue his trail of abductions...and sure enough that is exactly what he did.

In November he was caught enticing two young girls with money in Cleethorpes. Hunter admitted abducting a 12 year old girl and trying to abduct an 11 year old girl.

He reappeared before Judge Matthewman at Nottingham Crown Court where at long last, the judge appeared to have learned his lesson. He sentenced David Hunter to five years imprisonment. However even this means that he will be free within 3-4 years and quite able to continue with his "fetish" and with his obsession with the Dunblane tragedy.

This is a classic case of the problem of what to do with such people. The death penalty would be absurd - he hasn't actually physically harmed anyone, yet it is clearly extremely dangerous to release him back into the community - not least for his own safety, should local parents find out about his history. To jail him for life simply adds to the soaring prison population. The only solution which seems both humane and safe is for his restriction to a closed community leaders to a conference in Warrington has been condemned by the father of 3 year old Johnathan Ball who died in the IRA bomb in that town.

The so-called Warrington-Ireland Reconciliation Enterprise (WIRE) has been thinking of staging a major conference in the town.

Wilf Ball said: "We shouldn't be asking these people to our town".

Complaints by rail users up 55%

In figures released on 18th September it was disclosed that complaints in the first three months since all routes were run by private companies had soared by 55%. A total of 2,799 complaints were received compared with 1,797 for the same period the previous year.

Complaints covered such areas as unreliable services, seat reservations, cancellations, comfort, availability of station staff, ticket office opening hours and accuracy of information from phone enquiries

Bonkers Bonino?

Afghanistan is now a rigid and fundamentalist Islamic state. Not one of which a Western country might approve, but largely this is the wish of its deeply religious inhabitants. Democracy is a notion that is largely unknown in this part of the world, but there is no doubt that support for the Islamic Taliban is very strong.

Into such a country comes Emma Bonino, the European Commissioner for Humanitarian Affairs - The Interferer General.

She totally ignores their customs, charges into a women's hospital with her entourage of press flunkies, cameramen, etc. as if she were some latter day Lady Bountiful.

One local official said: "It is the policy of the Taliban that no unrelated man may take pictures of women."

The Taliban are not amused by her breaches of their laws and so they arrest her, rather forcibly. E.U. officials were slapped around the head (something we would all like to do) and poor Emma was arrested.

"This is an example of how people live here in a state of terror" she bleated. However her officials in Brussels were less than panic-stricken: "It's just another Bonino set up. It is no coincidence she had a CNN crew with her at the time".

GUARD

51 OUT NOW!!

nts Include:

ies - The Great Bribe Common Market
um - Re-visited ment & Women
- God Help Ulster
Burke's Legacy
ther of English Painting
cluding postage
uard Publications
$9, London E6 3RF

CAPITAL PUNISHMENT OR MORE CHILD MURDERS?

CONVICTED PAEDOPHILES walk free from court as weak liberal politicians prevent our courts from handing out appropriate sentences to the perverts that prey on our children.

Time, and time again, we see paedophiles convicted of sexually abusing children, receive "probation" or a "brief" spell in prison. It has been proven beyond doubt that when they are released, the vast majority will go on to re-offend and ruin the lives of yet more children.

ALL recent public opinion polls show that the overwhelming majority of British people want Capital Punishment introduced yet Conservatives and the Liberal Democrats continue to ignore your views and are thus responsible for the release of paedophiles back into your community, some even live next door to parks and schools!

DNA, genetic fingerprinting and forensic science has now progressed to the stage that mistakes can no longer be made.

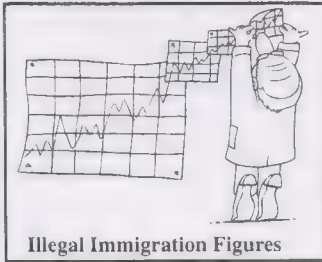

We are the ONLY political party that will do something about the growing plague of paedophilia that is rife in the UK. We will PERMANENTLY remove people convicted of sexually abusing children from society. The safety of our children must be paramount.

No second chance - No second offence!

THE DEATH PENALTY

A leaflet produced by the South West England Branch of the National Democrats

Immigration Chaos

The number of illegal immigrants, already high is about to become astronomical, as the number of immigration officers is set to be slashed by 1,200. Complete chaos could be caused by a threat from the Civil Service Unions to go on strike over these cuts.

With nearly a quarter of the immigration service now under threat of redundancy it is clear that Blair's New Labour Government is declaring an open-door policy towards illegal immigration.

Every year there are now thousands of illegal immigrants pouring into Britain. There is currently a backlog of 57,500 immigration cases to be dealt with, compared to just 8,650 in 1988. And these are just the official figures. Immigration officials estimate the true figure is about to top 100,000.

On top of this more than 44,000 "asylum seekers" have simply vanished without trace in the past seven years. Such asylum seekers are automatically granted entry while their application is processed - which can now take years. Very few efforts are made to track down such individuals, and even when caught, they often avoid deportation by, for example, the wife claiming political asylum - then the whole process starts all over again.

No one likes the idea of deportation with all its unpleasant connotations. The answer, of course, is simple. No one should be allowed to enter this country unless they have either a visitor's visa or they come from a country where there is an arrangement for non-visa entry - countries from where there is almost no illegal immigration.

All others, including those asking for political asylum must be held in detention centres on arrival. Individuals from countries which are not deemed to have any claim on Britain for asylum should be returned on the next flight at the expense of the aircraft operators.

Europe Plots The I Of Britain

SCOTLAND AND WALES NOW HAVE THEIR OWN ASSEMBLIES; Tony Blair has decided that London will soon have some form of Mayor and regional government/assembly. The rest of the U.K. has been divided into regions by European directive and each region already has its own "Regional Development Agency".

Tony Blair has spoken of the concept of a "Europe of the Regions". His commitment to Britain as part of whatever form the European Union takes was clearly set out in the 1997 New Labour Manifesto: "There are only three options for Britain in Europe. The first is to come out. The second is to stay in, but on the sidelines. The third is to stay in, but in a leading role.....The third is the path a new Labour Government will take".

So while Labour is in power Britain will simply go along with decisions made by the European Parliament. The Government's recent announcement that Britain will not be joining the single currency at the first opportunity is a back tracking on the manifesto commitment, but it is hardly a move towards re-asserting Britain's independence - it is simply an acknowledgement that the idea of a single European currency is totally anathema to the vast majority of British people and would be extremely difficult to force through at the moment.

In the meantime countries such as France and Germany and Belgium will continue to force through more and more moves towards full integration and the creation of a European Super State.

REGIONALISATION

One of the key joint initiatives which is being pushed through is the regionalisation of European nations

- for the very obvious reason that if they can destroy national identities and national loyalties then it will be easier for them to create this European Super State.

The destruction of the United Kingdom and the creation of such regions has already started. The Flag has in its possession an internal document headed by the Royal crest and the title: "Government Office for the South East" - "South East Regional Development Agency - Issues for Discussion". In this document it states that: "(Government) Ministers envisage the RDA taking a strategic overview of the South East economy and developing an economic development strategy. This would then inform the use and allocation of available resources and feed into other strategies, in particular the land use planning strategy for the region (currently being developed by SERPLAN). With that strategic role the RDA could represent the region in terms of economic development needs to national government and to the EU and could liaise with neighbouring regions".

Apart from the Orwellian and Stalinist overtones of 5-year plans there is in this sentence a clue to the likely future. These innocuously titled Regional Development Agencies are to "represent" the region when it comes to bidding for grants from national government AND from the E.U. In the latter case this means that the Region will by-pass national government and directly apply to the E.U. for grants.

Now the distribution of grants is always the precursor to first influence over policy, then control over policy. This is a clear blueprint for cutting out the need for national government and basing the future on tax hand outs directly from the European Parliament to these new Regions.

The next step would then be for some well-paid apparition in Brussels or Strasbourg to suggest that such regional authorities must be made more accountable - they should have regional assemblies - and there we have it: the U.K. broken up into regions, gone are loyalties to nation, to flag, to our heritage and in comes European authority in its usual German-style where even the most mundane things have to be accompanied by forms in triplicate and official approval. It is quite simply the old trick of Divide and Rule.

To see how quickly this is being imposed it is only necessary to look at other sections of this document to see what other areas are being considered for regionalisation: Transport: Should the RDA be in-

POLICY BRIEFING FROM THE NATIONAL DEMOCRATS

PRIVACY LAWS

With the tragic death of the Princess of Wales the question of privacy laws has again raised its head. The media who "conduct" the debate on the idea of such laws are both biased and hypocrites - they are hardly likely to support the concept of laws which restrict their freedom to pry, interfere and wreck the lives of people on the basis that such articles infringe the privacy of individuals.

The death of the Princess of Wales highlighted such hypocrisy. On the very day of her death the Sunday Mirror ran a gloss magazine full of intrusive photographs of her with Dodi Fayed taken with high powered lenses and of the couple on board a private yacht. As soon as the possibility that members of the "paparazzi" had contributed

Chaos in

figure is about to top 100,000.

On top of this more than 44,000 "asylum seekers" have simply vanished without trace in the past seven years. Such asylum seekers are automatically granted entry while their application is processed - which can now take years. Very few efforts are made to track down such individuals, and even when caught, they often avoid deportation by, for example, the wife claiming political asylum - then the whole process starts all over again.

No one likes the idea of deportation with all its unpleasant connotations. The answer, of course, is simple. No one should be allowed to enter this country unless they have either a visitor's visa or they come from a country where there is an arrangement for non-visa entry - countries from where there is almost no illegal immigration.

All others, including those asking for political asylum must be held in detention centres on arrival. Individuals from countries which are not deemed to have any claim on Britain for asylum should be returned on the next flight at the expense of the aircraft operators.

This would mean that no further asylum seekers would be accepted from Eastern Europe, Africa, etc.

The United Nations charter makes it quite clear that political asylum seekers must seek such asylum in their first and nearest country of safety - not the one with the most stupid government and the best and easiest-to-fiddle social security system.

DO NOTHING OPPOSITION

contd. from Page 1.

and simply say: "Well, we're in now and it's too late to come out" - Just as "multiculturalism is here now - it's too late to do anything. Presumably if William Hague went home and found a burglar he would say: "Well, you're here now - it's too late to do anything".

What the people want is a party that knows right from wrong. The E.U. is wrong for Britain, let's get out. The single currency is wrong, let's not join. Multiculturalism is not working, let's halt all further immigration - even burgling William Hague's home is wrong - let's lock up the burglar.

The Tories have lost any sense of right and wrong and traditional British values - they are political dinosaurs - soon to be replaced by a new vibrant, confident political party of the people - the National Democrats.

anathema to the vast majority of British people and would be extremely difficult to force through at the moment.

In the meantime countries such as France and Germany and Belgium will continue to force through more and more moves towards full integration and the creation of a European Super State.

REGIONALISATION

One of the key joint initiatives which is being pushed through is the regionalisation of European nations

for Discussion". In this document it states that: "(Government) Ministers envisage the RDA taking a strategic overview of the South East economy and developing an economic development strategy. This would then inform the use and allocation of available resources and feed into other strategies, in particular the land use planning strategy for the region (currently being developed by SERPLAN). With that strategic role the RDA could represent the region in terms of economic development needs to national government and to

POLICY BRIEFING

FROM THE NATIONAL DEMOCRATS

PRIVACY LAWS

With the tragic death of the Princess of Wales the question of privacy laws has again raised its head. The media who "conduct" the debate on the idea of such laws are both biased and hypocrites - they are hardly likely to support the concept of laws which restrict their freedom to pry, interfere and wreck the lives of people on the basis that such articles infringe the privacy of individuals.

The death of the Princess of Wales highlighted such hypocrisy. On the very day of her death the Sunday Mirror ran a gloss magazine full of intrusive photographs of her with Dodi Fayed taken with high powered lenses and of the couple on board a private yacht. As soon as the possibility that members of the "paparazzi" had contributed towards the fatal crash, the Mirror immediately went on to the attack over "intrusive photographs".

However one can be sure that the editor was well aware that politicians in Britain will do absolutely nothing which will offend the modern robber barons of the press - and so it is. Where are the concrete proposals and Acts of Parliament which will guarantee the privacy of individuals? Instead we only hear talk of how difficult such an Act would be to draft.

The situation would be completely different if it was the private lives (and in some cases the fairly sordid private lives) of newspaper editors and journalists that were appearing on a regular basis.

The National Democrats do not believe that there should be a distinction between a person in the public eye and someone who is not. Everyone is entitled to a degree of privacy. The question that should give the guiding principles is: "How would you like it if a particular type of invasive journalism was used against you?"

On this basis the National Democrats would be in favour of two major changes in the law:

1. The copyright of any photograph taken of an individual while on private land belongs to that person and it would be illegal to print such a photograph without that person's permission.

2. Untrue statements, allegations or implications about an individual printed in a paper or given publicity on television or radio, must be corrected by a statement of the same size and location.

Thus if the front page of a newspaper is used to announce that one of the Spice Girls is really a man, once it is established that this is untrue, then the whole front page must be used for an apology - it is not acceptable for such apologies to be tucked away on page 49.

The decision about such matters to be made by a special court of law whose decisions must be binding and who will have the power to agree the wording of such retractions.

Journalists who continually fail to check their facts will soon find themselves in deep trouble with an editor who is continually forced to print such retractions which are likely to affect sales. Who knows even the National Union of Journalists might start to emphasise that the truth is more important than sales figures.

national government and directly apply to the E.U. for grants.

Now the distribution of grants is always the precursor to first influence over policy, then control over policy. This is a clear blueprint for cutting out the need for national government and basing the future on tax hand outs directly from the European Parliament to these new Regions.

The next step would then be for some well-paid apparition in Brussels or Strasbourg to suggest that such regional authorities must be made more accountable - they should have regional assemblies - and there we have it: the U.K. broken up into regions, gone are loyalties to nation, to flag, to our heritage and in comes European authority in its usual German-style where even the most mundane things have to be accompanied by forms in triplicate and official approval. It is quite simply the old trick of Divide and Rule.

To see how quickly this is being imposed it is only necessary to look at other sections of this document to see what other areas are being considered for regionalisation: Transport: Should the RDA be in-

Chaos in

The Campaign for Independent Britain is not exactly the most dynamic of organisations - indeed it has been in existence for nearly 25 years and yet probably less than one person in a thousand has ever heard of it. Yet even for them the current situation is laughable were it not a tragedy.

C.I.B. was set up in the '70's to act as an umbrella group for the various anti-Common Market groups. At the time it did some very good work, but it has rather degenerated into a talking shop run by a clique of old women (of both sexes).

At a time when there is a real possibility of a referendum on Britain joining in with a European single currency, you would think that this would concentrate the minds of their committee on how to combat this menace. It is therefore rather disappointing to see that they actually seem to be spending more time on internal squabbles and on hanging on to their positions within the organisation rather than on preparing to wage a major national campaign.

Following on from their rather strange Special Conference (reported in the last issue of The Flag) their latest bulletin contains an annex which includes a statement from Mr William Scott attacking the constitution of CIB and some of the actions of the committee.

Mr Scott points out the rather strange way in which the committee is formed with various groups hav-

Europe Plots The Destruction Of Britain

BRITAINS NOW HAVE THEIR OWN ASSEMBLIES; Tony Blair has decided to have some form of Mayor and regional government/assembly. The U.K. has been divided into regions by European directive and now has its own "Regional Development Agency".

of the concept of a "Europe of the Regions". His commitment to reform the European Union takes was clearly set out in the 1997 New Labour manifesto. There are only three options for Britain in Europe. The first is to come out, but on the sidelines. The third is to stay in, but in a leading role.....The Labour Government will take".

British - for the very obvious reason that if they can destroy national identities and national loyalties then it will be easier for them to create this European Super State.

The destruction of the United Kingdom and the creation of such regions has already started. The Flag has in its possession an internal document headed by the Royal crest and the title: "Government Office for the South East" - "South East Regional Development Agency - Issues for Discussion". In this document it states that: "(Government) Ministers envisage the RDA taking a strategic overview of the South East economy and developing an economic development strategy. This would then inform the use and allocation of available resources and feed into other strategies, in particular the land use planning strategy for the region (currently being developed by SERPLAN). With that strategic role the RDA could represent the region in terms of economic development needs to national government and to the EU and could liaise with neighbouring regions".

Apart from the Orwellian and Stalinist overtones of 5-year plans there is in this sentence a clue to the likely future. These innocuously titled Regional Development Agencies are to "represent" the region when it comes to bidding for grants from national government AND from the E.U. In the latter case this means that the Region will by-pass national government and directly apply to the E.U. for grants.

Now the distribution of grants is always the precursor to first influence over policy, then control over policy. This is a clear blueprint for cutting out the need for national government and basing the future on tax hand outs directly from the European Parliament to these new Regions.

The next step would then be for some well-paid apparition in Brussels or Strasbourg to suggest that such regional authorities must be made more accountable - they should have regional assemblies - and there we have it: the U.K. broken up into regions, gone are loyalties to nation, to flag, to our heritage and in comes European authority in its usual German-style where even the most mundane things have to be accompanied by forms in triplicate and official approval. It is quite simply the old trick of Divide and Rule.

To see how quickly this is being imposed it is only necessary to look at other sections of this document to see what other areas are being considered for regionalisation: Transport: Should the RDA be in-

GOVERNMENT OFFICE
FOR THE SOUTH EAST

SOUTH EAST REGIONAL DEVELOPMENT AGENCY ISSUES FOR DISCUSSION

volved in the regulation of transport? Should the RDA have a budget for investing in transport?

Economics: Should the RDA have powers to require other organisations to have regard to its strategy?

Should the RDA have its own budget and what for? If so which budgets should it take over?

Should the RDA have a role in export and supply chain initiatives (presumably export means from Kent to London)?

Land: Should the RDA have a role in site assembly and site clearance for business investment?

Structure: Ministers have proposed that the RDA should be led by a board of no more than 15 members. Initially this Board would be appointed by the Secretary of State and be accountable through him to Parliament. In the longer term it should be accountable to a statutory regional chamber or assembly.

So there it is: the plan is to destroy national government, to dismantle our traditional counties and to replace them with new regional assemblies with real power having disappeared across the English Channel.

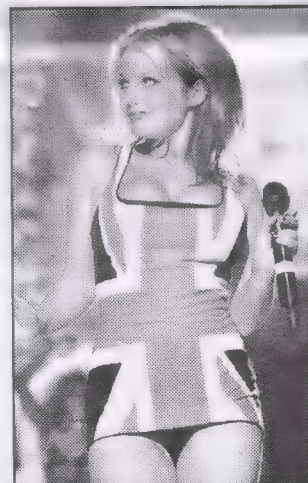

At a time when the British people want power to be brought closer to the people, this is a machiavellian plan to disenfranchise and destroy the British people and the British nation. Tony Blair came back from the Amsterdam summit with his piece of paper, but like Chamberlain before him it is time for the appeasers to go!

Y BRIEFING NATIONAL DEMOCRATS

Princess of Wales the question of pride in its head. The media who "conduct" the laws are both biased and hypocrites - support the concept of laws which restrict and wreck the lives of people on the range the privacy of individuals.

Princess of Wales highlighted such hypocrisy. On the Sunday Mirror ran a glossy magazine of her with Dodi Fayed taken with high couple on board a private yacht. As soon

We're Still British

Despite all the efforts of Euro-fanatics and all the money dished out by the E.U. the man on the Clapham omnibus is still firmly "British". In a recent survey carried out by the Sunday Times people were asked about their loyalties and identity.

When asked how they thought of themselves 87% described themselves either as English, Welsh, Scottish or British. Only 2% described themselves as European while 11% described themselves as something different e.g. Indian, Jamaican, etc. (an interesting sidelight on Lord Tebbit's recent remarks).

When asked where they lived just 1% said Europe, 99% gave one of the above answers. Asked about the extent of their loyalty to their coun-

Chaos in C.I.B.

for Discussion". In this document states that: "(Government) Ministers envisage the RDA taking a strategic overview of the South East economy and developing an economic development strategy. This would then inform the use and allocation of available resources and feed into other strategies, in particular the land use planning strategy for the region (currently being developed by SERPLAN). With that strategic role the RDA could represent the region in terms of economic development needs to national government and to the Princess of Wales the question of privacy is its head. The media who "conduct" the laws are both biased and hypocrites - support the concept of laws which restrict privacy and wreck the lives of people on the fringe the privacy of individuals.

BY BRIEFING NATIONAL DEMOCRATS

of wales highlighted such hypocrisy. On the Sunday Mirror ran a gloss magazine of her with Dodi Fayed taken with high couple on board a private yacht. As soon as the "paparazzi" had contributed the Mirror immediately went on to the attack on the couple.

re that the editor was well aware that politics is absolutely nothing which will offend the modest - and so it is. Where are the concrete proposals which will guarantee the privacy of individuals? Only hear talk of how difficult such an Act completely different if it was the private lives of newspaper editors were appearing on a regular basis.

do not believe that there should be a distinction in the public eye and someone who is entitled to a degree of privacy. The question that arises is: "How would you like it if a parliamentarianism was used against you?"

National Democrats would be in favour of two photograph taken of an individual while they are in the public eye and it would be illegal to do so without that person's permission.

legations or implications about an individual or given publicity on television or radio by a statement of the same size and of a newspaper is used to announce that a man, once it is established that this front page must be used for an apology - it is an apology to be tucked away on page 49. Matters to be made by a special court of law to be binding and who will have the power to make such retractions.

ally fail to check their facts will soon find themselves with an editor who is continually forced to apologise which are likely to affect sales. Who knows if Journalists might start to emphasise that their duty is to the public rather than sales figures.

national government and directly apply to the E.U. for grants.

Now the distribution of grants is always the precursor to first influence over policy, then control over policy. This is a clear blueprint for cutting out the need for national government and basing the future on tax hand outs directly from the European Parliament to these new Regions.

The next step would then be for some well-paid apparition in Brussels or Strasbourg to suggest that such regional authorities must be made more accountable - they should have regional assemblies - and there we have it: the U.K. broken up into regions, gone are loyalties to nation, to flag, to our heritage and in comes European authority in its usual German-style where even the most mundane things have to be accompanied by forms in triplicate and official approval. It is quite simply the old trick of Divide and Rule.

To see how quickly this is being imposed it is only necessary to look at other sections of this document to see what other areas are being considered for regionalisation:

Transport: Should the RDA be inport and supply chain means from Kent to London)?

Land: Should the RDA have a role in site assembly and site clearance for business investment?

Structure: Ministers have proposed that the RDA should be led by a board of no more than 15 members. Initially this Board would be appointed by the Secretary of State and be accountable through him to Par-

We're Still British

Despite all the efforts of Euro-fanatics and all the money dished out by the E.U. the man on the Clapham omnibus is still firmly "British". In a recent survey carried out by the Sunday Times people were asked about their loyalties and identity.

When asked how they thought of themselves 87% described themselves either as English, Welsh, Scottish or British. Only 2% described themselves as European while 11% described themselves as something different e.g. Indian, Jamaican, etc. (an interesting sidelight on Lord Tebbit's recent remarks).

When asked where they lived just 1% said Europe, 99% gave one of the above answers. Asked about the extent of their loyalty to their country over 64% said they would fight for their country under most circumstances.

In view of the attempt to regionalise the U.K. (described in the article above) it is reassuring to know that the Eurocrats are going to have fight on their hands. Asked if each region should have their own assembly only 15% were in favour; 71% gave a resounding NO!

Chaos in C.I.B.

The Campaign for Independent Britain is not exactly the most dynamic of organisations - indeed it has been in existence for nearly 25 years and yet probably less than one person in a thousand has ever heard of it. Yet even for them the current situation is laughable were it not a tragedy.

C.I.B. was set up in the '70's to act as an umbrella group for the various anti-Common Market groups. At the time it did some very good work, but it has rather degenerated into a talking shop run by a clique of old women (of both sexes).

At a time when there is a real possibility of a referendum on Britain joining in with a European single currency, you would think that this would concentrate the minds of their committee on how to combat this menace. It is therefore rather disappointing to see that they actually seem to be spending more time on internal squabbles and on hanging on to their positions within the organisation rather than on preparing to wage a major national campaign.

Following on from their rather strange Special Conference (reported in the last issue of The Flag) their latest bulletin contains an annex which includes a statement from Mr William Scott attacking the constitution of CIB and some of the actions of the committee.

Mr Scott points out the rather strange way in which the committee is formed with various groups having automatic representation on it.

These groups include, would you believe, The Cheaper Food League, and also the Campaign against Euro Federalism. This latter organisation is essentially a Labour Party grouping and they produce a magazine called "The Democrat". In their latest issue is an article entitled "Scotland Says Yes-Yes". It goes on to say: "Congratulations to all those who worked for a successful 'yes-yes' vote in the Scottish referendum. Those campaigning included members of Scottish CAEF.....This step towards Scottish independence clearly supported by a majority of the electorate will hopefully be repeated in Wales."

So we have the interesting situation whereby an organisation actively working for the break up of Britain has automatic representation on the committee of the Campaign for an Independent Britain.

Fortunately, and perhaps only in the nick of time, there are now at least two other groups which are seeking to actively co-ordinate the campaign against Britain's membership of the E.U. and which are quickly attracting active C.I.B. members and officials who have become fed up with the office-clinging priority of some committee members. It may be a case of C.I.B. - R.I.P. but a new lease of life for the anti-E.U. campaign.

Meet The National Democrats meetings

A series of "Meet the National Democrats" meetings are now taking place around the country. A typical example was one held recently in Worthing in Sussex where a small number of people from other anti-E.U. parties attended a gathering in a pleasant local hotel where they met National Democrat Chairman, Ian Anderson. Other meetings have taken place in Lancashire and in the East Anglia areas, while several more are planned with the next one being in Kent.

While these are being organised partly with an eye to recruitment, they are also an opportunity for members of other parties to come along and ask questions and to meet National Democrat members. There is no obligation and the meetings are proving reasonably popular and very enjoyable for all concerned.

A TALE OF TWO MEETINGS

IN THE LAST Month two very different anti-EU meetings have taken place in an effort to get different parties and groups to work together. The bad news first ironically concerns the larger of the two meetings.

On Saturday 4th October a meeting of the New Alliance Forum took place at the London School of Economics. The attendance was about 300 and there was an impressive sounding list of speakers - however that's the end of the good news.

For three hours the various speakers delivered their orations - some were witty, some entertaining, some quite interesting, such as Henrik Overgaard-Nielson from Denmark. They told the 300 all about the evils of the E.U. and all spoke of how we should all work together to get Britain out - but that was it.

Almost no concrete proposals were put forward, no plans of action, indeed the committee the night before hadn't even been able to agree on who was going to chair the meeting.

The whole tone of the meeting went from one of enthusiastic expectation and the good speech delivered by Nigel Farage down to a feeling of uselessness and frustration summed up by one Referendum Movement member who asked (in all innocence) what the people attending the meeting were supposed to do - this seemed to rather puzzle the committee. After the meeting one person while leaving the hall was heard to comment: "If I didn't know better I would say that that lot were being set up by the pro-Europeans to make sure there is no effective anti-EU campaign in Britain".

In almost complete contrast there was an informal gathering of about 50 anti-E.U. activists and officials from various parties including the National Democrats in the Midlands. It was organised by a group called "Pro Britain" Although everyone had been asked to attend in a personal capacity rather than as a representative of a party or group these people came from a total of seven different national and regional political parties including the three main ones: The Referendum Movement, U.K.I.P. and the National Democrats.

The Organiser of the meeting made a short but to-the-point speech in which he outlined the very simple aims of Pro Britain.

These aims are:-

1. To encourage all anti-EU people to stand in public election on any openly anti-EU platform.
2. To publicise such candidates and to encourage other anti-EU individuals and groups to support them - even if they are not of the same party.
3. To compile a list of all candidates and elected individuals and to ascertain their stance towards the E.U. by means of a simple 2 part questionnaire asking if they would vote to withdraw Britain from the E.U.
4. To encourage co-operation at local level between anti-EU parties so as to avoid election clashes wherever possible.

The Organiser, Mike Smith, said that they were limiting themselves to this programme so as not to tread on the (very sensitive) toes of other organisations.

An enthusiastic discussion then took place and National Democrat Chairman, Ian Anderson, expressed his total support for the concepts that had been put forward and also offered the use of the extensive facilities of the National Democrats in support of any anti-EU candidates in public elections, and pointed out that already several smaller parties were availing themselves of this offer.

After the meeting a very pleasant social evening took place where the various people attending got to know each other much better and where a new spirit of British anti-EU camaraderie was seen to develop.

At the end of the evening one, older person said as he was leaving that he had been very disillusioned after the general election but that this get together of different groups had been "a real tonic" and had fired him up again for the fray.

Fiddling while Britain

IT IS NOW OBVIOUS TO EVERYONE who isn't a complete political genital idiot that Britain is going to be dragged into a situation whether we like it or not. On one hand we have Blair and his driving us quietly into surrendering our independence while we have William Hague hoping that labour will do it for him so that we can say that once in it is too late to back out.

What is depressing is that while this great betrayal is being planned British independence and liberty are squabbling about which general resistance effort. As one frustrated anti E.U. activist put it: "It's a bit like going to sit at the captain's table on board the Titanic".

Before the general election there were three national democratic anti-E.U. parties: The Referendum Party, the United Kingdom Independence Party and the National Democrats. There was one body which although largely ineffective was meant to co-ordinate the anti-E.U. campaign in Britain: C.I.B. - the Campaign for an Independent Britain.

Within hours of the election result the Referendum Party started its downward tumble to dissolution and it now has ceased to exist, although a few people struggle on in isolated areas. U.K.I.P. has been dealt a heavy blow by their former Chairman, Alan Sked, who has left to cosy-up to the Tories. Only the National Democrats have used the time after the election to grow rapidly.

It was in such circumstances that C.I.B. could have played a major role - by bringing the three parties, together with a number of smaller ones, together to form a loose alliance. Instead they have turned in on themselves and have become even more ineffective than before.

Partly in frustration at this incompetence we now have three quite different anti-E.U. groups trying to co-ordinate the anti-E.U. Movement. This farce has been largely caused by the egos of some of the individuals concerned and the determination of some old men to hang on to their jobs long after they ceased to be effective.

All this is profoundly frustrating and irritating to those activists who have tried to fight for Britain in their own area. However there is one small light at the end of this dark tunnel. Over the past month or so there have been a number of meetings at local level between members of the three main parties and some

The countdown to the European currency ha

1. On 2nd October Doug Henderson, Britain's Minister for Europe represented Britain at the signing of the Treaty of Amsterdam which reduces the rights of individual nations and increases, still further, the power of the European Parliament.

2. On 14th September it was announced that the rates at which European currencies will convert into the proposed single currency will be set eight months earlier than expected - early in 1998. Gordon Brown, Chancellor of the Exchequer was present at the Luxembourg meeting where this was decided.

3. At the end of August it was announced that by cutting back on services the government had managed to reduce its borrowing requirement to a level deemed acceptable for Britain to join the single cur-

The Pro Britain Questionnaire

To help this group in its work The Flag is encouraging all its readers to obtain copies of the questionnaire to be sent to M.P.'s, Parliamentary candi-

up by one Referendum Movement member who asked (in all innocence) what the people attending the meeting were supposed to do - this seemed to rather puzzle the committee. After the meeting one person while leaving the hall was heard to comment: "If I didn't know better I would say that that lot were being set up by the pro-Europeans to make sure there is no effective anti-EU campaign in Britain".

In almost complete contrast there was an informal gathering of about 50 anti-E.U. activists and officials from various parties including the National Democrats in the Midlands. It was organised by a group called "Pro Britain". Although everyone had been asked to attend in a personal capacity rather than as a representative of a party or group these people came from a total of seven different national and regional political parties including the three main ones: The Referendum Movement, U.K.I.P. and the National Democrats.

The Organiser of the meeting made organisations. An enthusiastic discussion then took place and National Democrat Chairman, Ian Anderson, expressed his total support for the concepts that had been put forward and also offered the use of the extensive facilities of the National Democrats in support of any anti-EU candidates in public elections, and pointed out that already several smaller parties were availing themselves of this offer.

After the meeting a very pleasant social evening took place where the various people attending got to know each other much better and where a new spirit of British anti-EU camaraderie was seen to develop.

At the end of the evening one, older person said as he was leaving that he had been very disillusioned after the general election but that this get together of different groups had been "a real tonic" and had fired him up again for the fray.

Sked, who has left to cosy-up to the Tories. Only the National Democrats have used the time after the election to grow rapidly.

It was in such circumstances that C.I.B. could have played a major role - by bringing the three parties, and having at least one activist who have tried to fight for Britain in their own area. However there is one small light at the end of this dark tunnel. Over the past month or so there have been a number of meetings at local level between members of the three main parties and some

The countdown to the European currency ha

1. On 2nd October Doug Henderson, Britain's Minister for Europe represented Britain at the signing of the Treaty of Amsterdam which reduces the rights of individual nations and increases, still further, the power of the European Parliament.

2. On 14th September it was announced that the rates at which European currencies will convert into the proposed single currency will be set eight months earlier than expected - early in 1998. Gordon Brown, Chancellor of the Exchequer was present at the Luxembourg meeting where this was decided.

3. At the end of August it was announced that by cutting back on services the government had managed to reduce its borrowing requirement to a level deemed acceptable for Britain to join the single cur-

The Pro Britain Questionnaire

To help this group in its work The Flag is encouraging all its readers to obtain copies of the questionnaire to be sent to M.P.'s, Parliamentary candidates, local councillors, etc.

Supplies of the questionnaire can be obtained directly from The Flag either by writing or by phone - but you must state who you are intending to send them to so as to ensure that the work is not duplicated. Where possible you should send them out together with a stamped addressed envelope. The envelopes will be provided but not the stamp

The Future of the U.K.?

The above map came from a booklet being sent free to schools by the E.U. It shows the regions into which the U.K. is to be divided up on the divide-and-rule principle.

THE National Democrats have not fought any local council by-elections since the last issue of The Flag, however there have been three elections which are of interest.

The first one was in Enfield where the UKIP candidate achieved a very good 9.2% with 185 votes and managed to beat the Liberal Democrat

In Canterbury in Kent, UKIP fought the Correll ward achieving 14 votes, 1.1%, while on the same day Mark Ellis stood as a Pathfinder candidate in the Denton Green ward of Sevenoaks, also in Kent. He achieved 3.1%.

Since the general election the percentage results achieved by democratic patriotic parties in various elections are in descending order:-

UKIP	Enfield	9.9
Nat-Dems	Derby	7.9
Nat-Dems	Sandwell	7.0
UKIP	Enfield	6.4
Pathfinder	Sevenoaks	3.1
UKIP	Canterbury	1.1
UKIP	Gillingham	1.0

The average results work out as:-

National Democrats:	7.4%
UKIP	4.6%
Pathfinder	3.1%

ANTI-EU PRINTING AT DISCOUNT PRICES

5,000 LEAFLETS FOR £40

10,000 LEAFLETS FOR £65

Prices include design, artwork and printing and, if requested, advice on content.

Also Letterheadings, etc.

This offer is only open to genuine organisations committed to withdrawing Britain from the E.U.

Phone 0181-471 6872 for details

LATE EXTRA

In Wellingborough, Northants U.K.I.P. contested the Brickhill ward. In a three cornered contest with no Liberal Democrat they achieved 3.7% of the vote.

The full result was:

Labour	694	54.6%
Conservative	530	41.7%
UKIP	47	3.7%

Fiddling while Britain Burns

IT IS NOW OBVIOUS TO EVERYONE who isn't a complete political innocent nor a congenital idiot that Britain is going to be dragged into a single European currency whether we like it or not. On one hand we have Blair and his poodle ~~paddy~~ Ashdown driving us quietly into surrendering our independence while on the other hand we have William Hague hoping that labour will do it for him so that all he has to do is to say that once in it is too late to back out.

What is depressing is that while this great betrayal is being planned the so-called champions of British independence and liberty are squabbling about which generals should be in charge of the resistance effort. As one frustrated anti E.U. activist put it: "It's a bit like arguing over who is going to sit at the captain's table on board the Titanic".

Before the general election there were three national democratic anti-E.U. parties: The Referendum Party, the United Kingdom Independence Party and the National Democrats. There was one body which although largely ineffective was meant to co-ordinate the anti-E.U. campaign in Britain: C.I.B. - the Campaign for an Independent Britain.

Within hours of the election result the Referendum Party started its downward hurtle to dissolution and it now has ceased to exist, although a few people struggle on in isolated areas. U.K.I.P. has been dealt a heavy blow by their former Chairman, Alan Sked, who has left to cosy-up to the Tories. Only the National Democrats have used the time after the election to grow rapidly.

It was in such circumstances that C.I.B. could have played a major role - by bringing the three parties, together with a number of smaller ones, together to form a loose alliance. Instead they have turned in on themselves and have become even more ineffective than before.

Partly in frustration at this incompetence we now have three quite different anti-E.U. groups trying to co-ordinate the anti-E.U. Movement. This farce has been largely caused by the egos of some of the individuals concerned and the determination of some old men to hang on to their jobs long after they ceased to be effective.

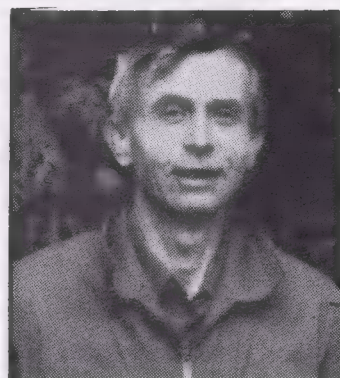

All this is profoundly frustrating and irritating to those activists who have tried to fight for Britain in their own area. However there is one small light at the end of this dark tunnel. Over the past month or so there have been a number of meetings at local level between members of the three main parties and some smaller ones and slowly electoral agreements are being reached and, in a few cases, there is now active co-operation, ironically some of the people who have been doing this have been threatened with disciplinary action by their so-called leaders.

It is terrible fact that Britain is being betrayed by our political leaders in Westminster, it is even sadder that the movements that are supposed to be fighting for the British people against E.U. domination are also being led by some individuals who are putting their ambition and ego ahead of the interests of their members and the British people.

With time running short in the battle for our nation's independence it is to be hoped that the growing anger amongst anti-E.U. activists will force the various groups into some form of co-operation.

Pathfinders Join National Democrats

The Kent-based Pathfinders organisation has been co-operating with the National Democrats for some time and these links have developed to such a level that their leader, Mark Ellis has now joined the National Democrats.

This has given a spur to the recent efforts to build the party in Kent, and he and his members are welcome new recruits to our growing movement. The party has also entered into electoral agreements and co-operation agreements with several other smaller parties in different parts of the country.

U.K.I.P. - Here we go again

With the departure of Alan Sked there was some chance that the UKIP might acquire some realism at its Regent Street head office. Apparently such a possibility is now unlikely. In their October bulletin, new and glossy but the same old "leader's photograph" in the centre of the front page, they appear bent on making all the same mistakes again.

Craig Mackinlay, the new leader in his first report states bluntly: "ON May 1st 1998 approximately 4,000 council seats will be up for election. If the party can muster candidates for 10% of these seats we will be entitled to an election broadcast..... You need not even bother with a leaflet if funds are tight"

Firstly a party where just 1,282 members bother to vote in their own elections is rather unlikely to be able to field 400 local election candidates. Secondly mustering 400 candidates does not entitle a party to an election broadcast. Thirdly to put up candidates who will have absolutely no campaign is the shortest road I know to political suicide. Even with a campaign of sorts, UKIP gained just 39 votes in the Uxbridge Parliamentary by-election. In local elections with campaigns they have been getting votes as low as 1% although mem-

The countdown to the single European currency has begun

1. On 2nd October Doug Henderson, Britain's Minister for Europe represented Britain at the signing of the Treaty of Amsterdam which reduces the rights of individual nations and increases, still further, the power of the European Parliament.

2. On 14th September it was announced that the rates at which European currencies will convert into the proposed single currency will be set eight months earlier than expected - early in 1998. Gordon Brown, Chancellor of the Exchequer was present at the Luxembourg meeting where this was decided.

3. At the end of August it was announced that by cutting back on services the government had managed to reduce its borrowing requirement to a level deemed acceptable for Britain to join the single currency.

4. On 29th September it was announced that the "deal" between Labour and the Euro fanatic Liberal Democrats was to be extended to cover the issue of how the government should approach its presidency of the European Union which runs for the first six months of 1998.

5. The government has applied to the European Union for financial help to "explain" the single currency to the British people.

The Battle For Britain's Independence is on!! The traitors are already planning their victory celebrations. Will this be another case of the many relying on the resistance of the few?

now by their former Chairman, Alan Sked, who has left to cosy-up to the Tories. Only the National Democrats have used the time after the election to grow rapidly.

It was in such circumstances that C.I.B. could have played a major role - by bringing the three parties, and irritating to those activists who have tried to fight for Britain in their own area. However there is one small light at the end of this dark tunnel. Over the past month or so there have been a number of meetings at local level between members of the three main parties and some ahead of the interests of their members and the British people.

With time running short in the battle for our nation's independence it is to be hoped that the growing anger amongst anti-E.U. activists will force the various groups into some form of co-operation.

The countdown to the single European currency has begun

1. On 2nd October Doug Henderson, Britain's Minister for Europe represented Britain at the signing of the Treaty of Amsterdam which reduces the rights of individual nations and increases, still further, the power of the European Parliament.

2. On 14th September it was announced that the rates at which European currencies will convert into the proposed single currency will be set eight months earlier than expected - early in 1998. Gordon Brown, Chancellor of the Exchequer was present at the Luxembourg meeting where this was decided.

3. At the end of August it was announced that by cutting back on services the government had managed to reduce its borrowing requirement to a level deemed acceptable for Britain to join the single currency.

4. On 29th September it was announced that the "deal" between Labour and the Euro fanatic Liberal Democrats was to be extended to cover the issue of how the government should approach its presidency of the European Union which runs for the first six months of 1998.

5. The government has applied to the European Union for financial help to "explain" the single currency to the British people.

The Battle For Britain's Independence is on!! The traitors are already planning their victory celebrations. Will this be another case of the many relying on the resistance of the few?

The Future of the U.K.?

The above map came from a booklet being sent free to schools by the E.U. It shows the regions into which the U.K. is to be divided up on the divide-and-rule principle.

LATE EXTRA

In Wellingborough, Northants U.K.I.P. contested the Brickhill ward. In a three cornered contest with no Liberal Democrat they achieved 3.7% of the vote.

The full result was:

Labour	694	54.6%
Conservative	530	41.7%
UKIP	47	3.7%

ELECTION RESULTS

THE National Democrats have not fought any local council by-elections since the last issue of The Flag, however there have been three elections which are of interest.

The first one was in Enfield where the UKIP candidate achieved a very good 9.2% with 185 votes and managed to beat the Liberal Democrat

In Canterbury in Kent, UKIP fought the Correll ward achieving 14 votes, 1.1%, while on the same day Mark Ellis stood as a Pathfinder candidate in the Denton Green ward of Sevenoaks, also in Kent. He achieved 3.1%.

Since the general election the percentage results achieved by democratic patriotic parties in various elections are in descending order:-

UKIP	Enfield	9.9
Nat-Dems	Derby	7.9
Nat-Dems	Sandwell	7.0
UKIP	Enfield	6.4
Pathfinder	Sevenoaks	3.1
UKIP	Canterbury	1.1
UKIP	Gillingham	1.0

The average results work out as:-

National Democrats:	7.4%
UKIP	4.6%
Pathfinder	3.1%

Enfield Council, Worcester Ward

	votes	votes	%
Conservative	967	936	45
Labour	792	790	37
UKIP	185		9
Lib-Dem	98	83	4

There were two vacancies in this ward, but UKIP only fielded one candidate, to work out the percentages the votes of the three other parties have been averaged.

Sevenoaks Council, Denton Green Ward

Labour	171	36.9%
Conservative	165	35.6%
Lib-Dem	99	21.4%
Pathfinder	14	3.1%

Canterbury Council, Correll ward

Labour	557	42.7%
Conservative	567	43.5%
Lib-Dem	151	11.6%
UKIP	14	1.1%

The only other election since the general election has been the Uxbridge Parliamentary by-election where The National Democrats received 157 votes and came 7th out of 11 candidates, while the UKIP candidate received 39 votes and came 10th.

We go again

With the departure of Alan Sked there was some chance that the UKIP might acquire some realism at its Regent Street head office. Apparently such a possibility is now unlikely. In their October bulletin, new and glossy but the same old "leader's photograph" in the centre of the front page, they appear bent on making all the same mistakes again.

Craig Mackinlay, the new leader in his first report states bluntly: "ON May 1st 1998 approximately 4,000 council seats will be up for election. If the party can muster candidates for 10% of these seats we will be entitled to an election broadcast.....You need not even bother with a leaflet if funds are tight"

Firstly a party where just 1,282 members bother to vote in their own elections is rather unlikely to be able to field 400 local election candidates. Secondly mustering 400 candidates does not entitle a party to an election broadcast. Thirdly to put up candidates who will have absolutely no campaign is the shortest road I know to political suicide. Even with a campaign of sorts, UKIP gained just 39 votes in the Uxbridge Parliamentary by-election. In local elections with campaigns they have been getting votes as low as 1% although members have not been told about this.

As usual the voice of reality comes from the members. In a letter, Roger Bullock from Plymouth states: "If we had more open debate within the party perhaps they would have voiced their criticisms in a more civilised way (a reference to recent hate mail between party members)..... I do hope UKIP survives this upheaval which could not come at a worse time. We should have been building on the momentum gained at the General Election and picking up members of the Referendum Party (Has he been reading Vanguard?). Instead we seem to be losing members."

Indeed the number of people leaving UKIP at senior level seems to be increasing. This may be due, in part, to the fact that the person that Alan Sked clearly implied was involved in the hate mail and other unpleasant activities while being decisively voted off the National Executive is now a leading contributor to their newsletter.

AN APOLOGY: In the last issue of The Flag we reported that "Nigel Farrage" was not standing for the National Executive - while this is technically correct we failed to point out that he was already a member of the Executive and did not need to stand. We also apologise for the misspelling of his name which is Nigel Farage.

The FLAG

Editorial

Editor: Ian Anderson

Contributing Editors:

John Stephens

Martin Wingfield

P.O.Box 2269, London E6 3RF

Telephone: 0181-471 6872

e mail: natdems@netlink.co.uk

www page: <http://www.netlink.co.uk/users/natdems>

The Bankruptcy of the Ne

As each week goes past the political bankruptcy of our New Labour Government is steadily becoming more obvious - it is now very obvious to those of us who watch political events closely and it is now starting to be obvious to the people in general. They are starting to realise that behind that vacuous smile of Tony Blair there is very little substance.

One recent event shows this failure to grasp the reins of power - the sudden, but hardly unexpected arrival in this country of gypsies from the former Yugoslavia. All the warning signs for this have been present for some time. The trickle of 'asylum seekers' from the Balkans has been growing into a steady flow for some time as word got around about how easy it is to get into Britain and to claim social security benefits. This arrival of gypsies is not quite as sudden as the papers make out. As shown on page 8 there has been a problem with gypsy "immigrants" for the past few months - yet despite all these warning signs the Government did

Southern Ireland's Presidential Elections

THE STATE OF THE FOREIGN COUNTRY WHOSE Constitution lays claim to the British Province of Ulster has been clearly shown by the calibre of candidates on offer for the Irish Republic's Presidential Election on October 30th. Candidates who would have offered a poor choice for a local council election in the rest of the British Isles.

The only Irish Presidential candidate anyone outside the Emerald Isle will ever have heard of is Dana, real name Rosemary Scallon. Her claim to fame is to have won the Eurovision Song Contest in 1970 with a saccharine burbling entitled All Kinds of Everything. She won this place in the pantheon of European Culture, with typical Irish republican provocation, as the "Republic of Ireland" entry even though she and her family for many generations were British born and bred, from Londonderry, a city of course as British as Liverpool. Despite her British nationality and the fact that for many years past she has lived some way from the Ould Sod in Birmingham, Alabama, USA, she is standing for the Irish Presidency as the "traditional family values" candidate. Her only discernible policies are opposition to abortion and support for Country and Western music, which as we shall see make Dana in many ways the least objectionable candidate. Even if it is a bit like putting up Cilla Black for Prime Minister.

Ironically Mary MacAleese, the candidate of the most openly IRA-oriented Irish Republic party, Fianna Fail, is also British born and bred. She comes from Belfast. In fact she still lives and works in that British city, as a lecturer in law at Queen's University, of which she is also Pro-Vice Chancellor. Her most significant contribution there has been to vote to ban the National Anthem at clearly believes in keeping up that tradition of hatred towards our - and in truth her own - country.

Despite which she lives off the British taxpayer, who pays her university salary, thus continuing a long Irish Republican tradition whereby hostility towards the British crown is only matched by greed for the British half-crown. Gerry Adams and many other IRA men long had Begorrah, I think I'll be standing don't you know.

Irish Presidential candidate MacAleese was also not averse to accepting from the "British Police State" the job of being a non-executive director of Channel Four (though in fairness there is very little British about Channel Four!)

Apart from making a typically republican career of biting the hand that feeds her, MacAleese's other political attitudes can be gauged from the fact that she is a founder member of the Irish Campaign for

Republic parties, they have selected a candidate who has close personal links to the Provo murder gang. Ms. Roche's brother, who calls himself "Donal O'Roiste", is an active member of Sinn Fein/IRA. When asked about this he proudly boasted that he was "a Republican in a Republican country".

Whilst the main Irish Opposition Party, Fine Gael, descended from an earlier IRA splinter group than the ruling Fianna Fail, nominated one Mary Banotti for President. Despite her un-Irish surname Ms. Banotti is the grand-niece of IRA "hero" Michael Collins. Collins' claim to a place in the Republican Hall of Fame is that he was good at murdering British, including Irish, policemen when they were sleeping in their beds. It says a lot for the state of Irish Republic politics that a Presidential candidate should parade her relationship with a scumbag like that as the electoral asset that it evidently is there. As if a British candidate stood to gain votes from boasting of being related to one of the Moors' Murderers.

That such a melee of mediocrities should be competing for the top job says a lot about the nature and level of public life in the Irish Republic. A state founded by gunmen and now run by gangsters. The ordinary Irish people, who for 725 out of the last 800 years have been our fellow British citizens, surely deserve better.

Some of them are starting to realise as much. In September, whilst the October 30th. Candidates who would have offered a poor choice for a local council election in the rest of the British Isles.

The only Irish Presidential candidate anyone outside the Emerald Isle will ever have heard of is Dana, real name Rosemary Scallon. Her claim to fame is to have won the Eurovision Song Contest in 1970 with a saccharine burbling entitled All Kinds of Everything. She won this place in the pantheon of European Culture, with typical Irish republican provocation, as the "Republic of Ireland" entry even though she and her family for many generations were British born and bred, from Londonderry, a city of course as British as Liverpool. Despite her British nationality and the fact that for many years past she has lived some way from the Ould Sod in Birmingham, Alabama, USA, she is standing for the Irish Presidency as the "traditional family values" candidate. Her only discernible policies are opposition to abortion and support for Country and Western music, which as we shall see make Dana in many ways the least objectionable candidate. Even if it is a bit like putting up Cilla Black for Prime Minister.

Ironically Mary MacAleese, the candidate of the most openly IRA-oriented Irish Republic party, Fianna Fail, is also British born and bred. She comes from Belfast. In fact she still lives and works in that British city, as a lecturer in law at Queen's University, of which she is also Pro-Vice Chancellor. Her most significant contribution there has been to vote to ban the National Anthem at the University's graduation ceremonies. Her party started out as an IRA splinter group, and Mrs MacAleese clearly believes in keeping up that tradition of hatred towards our - and in truth her own - country.

Despite which she lives off the British taxpayer, who pays her university salary, thus continuing a long Irish Republican tradition whereby hostility towards the British crown is only matched by greed for the British half-crown. Gerry Adams and many other IRA men long had their bills paid by the British Social Security, freeing them to be terrorists full-time.

Begorrah, I think I'll be standing don't you know.

Irish Presidential candidate MacAleese was also not averse to accepting from the "British Police State" the job of being a non-executive director of Channel Four (though in fairness there is very little British about Channel Four!)

Apart from making a typically republican career of biting the hand that feeds her, MacAleese's other political attitudes can be gauged from the fact that she is a founder member of the Irish Campaign for Homosexual Law Reform. How that will go down with her party's bed-rock support base of red-faced peasant farmers from the bogs of rural Ireland remains to be seen. As the candidate of Fianna Fail, the Republic's governing party, her campaign will not be helped by the corruption and bribery scandals breaking round the heads of her Party's leadership. Halfway through her campaign her colleague, Irish Foreign Minister, Ray Burke was ignominiously forced to resign from all public offices for having been involved in a bribery scandal. Whilst former FF Prime Minister and one of those who helped found the Provisional IRA, Charles Haughey is facing possible jail for taking huge bribes from Irish department store magnate Ben Dunne.

Adi Roche, the Labour party Presidential candidate, is at least actually Irish rather than a U.K. citizen. But whilst the Labour Party is less openly Republican than most Irish was "a Republican in a Republican country".

Whilst the main Irish Opposition Party, Fine Gael, descended from an earlier IRA splinter group than the ruling Fianna Fail, nominated one Mary Banotti for President. Despite her un-Irish surname Ms. Banotti is the grand-niece of IRA "hero" Michael Collins. Collins' claim to a place in the Republican Hall of Fame is that he was good at murdering British, including Irish, policemen when they were sleeping in their beds. It says a lot for the state of Irish Republic politics that a Presidential candidate should parade her relationship with a scumbag like that as the electoral asset that it evidently is there. As if a British candidate stood to gain votes from boasting of being related to one of the Moors' Murderers.

That such a melee of mediocrities should be competing for the top job says a lot about the nature and level of public life in the Irish Republic. A state founded by gunmen and now run by gangsters. The ordinary Irish people, who for 725 out of the last 800 years have been our fellow British citizens, surely deserve better.

Some of them are starting to realise as much. In September, whilst the sordid scramble for the top job in the breakaway Irish statelet was in full swing, a group of mostly Catholic Southern Irish people, many of them students and University graduates, set up the first openly Irish Unionist political group. The first such since the substantial section of the Irish population who remained loyal to our, and their, country - Britain - was crushed into silence by murder, massacre and ethnic cleansing in the 1920's. Followed by decades of institutionalised discrimination in jobs and education by the Irish state against its loyal British inhabitants.

The Dublin Universities Independent Unionist Association hopes to lead the people of Ireland out of the sordid swamp of separatism into which they have been betrayed back into the bosom of their British motherland. We wish them well. Ireland deserves better than rule by corrupt nonentities resting on a mythology of hatred and murder.

BACK ISSUES OF THE FLAG AND VANGUARD

THE FLAG

- No. 87. Riots Go Free
- No. 88. A Sick Society
- No. 89. Invasion!
- No. 90. Stop The Spanish Fishing Armada
- No. 91. Abduction-Torture-Rape: Out In Three Years
- No. 92. Election Progress
- No. 93. National Democrats Getting Results
- No. 94. Britain Is Too Overcrowded
- No. 95. British Pensioners Deserve A new Deal
- No. 96. They're Trying To destroy The U.K.
- No. 97. Crime Epidemic
- No. 98. Blair Silent on Animal Slaughter

£1.00 each including postage, or all 12 for £10, from Flag Newspapers, P.O. Box 2269, London E6 3RF.

VANGUARD

- No. 46. The Demise of British Aviation
- No. 47. Britannia
- No. 48. Immigration Set To Destroy Our Countryside
- No. 49. They fought to keep Ulster British
- No. 50. William Wordsworth

£2.00 each including postage from Vanguard Publications, P.O. Box 2269, London E6 3RF.

Visit Our Web Site

The National Democrat web site on the Internet is one of the best political sites of any U.K. party Regularly up-dated and with quizzes, current events, etc.

The address is:-

<http://www.netlink.co.uk/users/natdems>

The Bankruptcy of the New Labour Government

G As each week goes past the political bankruptcy of our New Labour Government is steadily becoming more obvious - it is now very obvious to those of us who watch political events closely and it is now starting to be obvious to the people in general. They are starting to realise that behind that vacuous smile of Tony Blair there is very little substance.

One recent event shows this failure to grasp the reins of power - the sudden, but hardly unexpected arrival in this country of gypsies from the former Yugoslavia. All the warning signs for this have been present for some time. The trickle of 'asylum seekers' from the Balkans has been growing into a steady flow for some time as word got around about how easy it is to get into Britain and to claim social security benefits. This arrival of gypsies is not quite as sudden as the papers make out. As shown on page 8 there has been a problem with gypsy "immigrants" for the past few months - yet despite all these warning signs the Government did absolutely nothing and then suddenly they have a crisis on their hand. As the Americans would say: "This isn't government - this is crisis management" and no way to run a country.

The moral bankruptcy of the Government is shown by their handling of the case of the two Scottish guardsmen again covered on page 8 who are still languishing in jail. The government's interference in their release has been motivated by a desire to appease the murderers and terrorists of Sinn Fein/IRA and to stop them, horror of horrors, from walking out on Mo Mowlem's peace talks.

Political bankruptcy - moral bankruptcy - and should they keep us in Europe - then real bankruptcy. But as Churchill said: "This is not the beginning of the end, but it may be the end of the beginning" of the battle to save our nation and to restore the pride and self government of the British people.

Presidential Elections

Begorrah, I think I'll be standing don't you know.

Irish Presidential candidate MacAleese was also not averse to accepting from the "British Police State" the job of being a non-executive director of Channel Four (though in fairness there is very little British about Channel Four!)

Apart from making a typically republican career of biting the hand that feeds her, MacAleese's other political attitudes can be gauged from the fact that she is a founder member of the Irish Commission for

Republic parties, they have selected a candidate who has close personal links to the Provo murder gang. Ms. Roche's brother, who calls himself: "Donal O'Roiste", is an active member of Sinn Fein/IRA. When asked about this he proudly boasted that he was "a Republican in a Republican country".

Whilst the main Irish Opposition Party, Fine Gael, descended from an earlier IRA splinter group than the ruling Fianna Fail, nominated one Mary Banotti for President. Despite her un-Irish surname Ms. Banotti is the grand-niece of IRA "hero" Michael Collins. Collins' claim to a place in the Republican Hall of Fame is that he was good at murdering British, including Irish, policemen when they were sleeping in their beds. It says a lot for the state of Irish Republic politics that a Presidential candidate should parade her relationship with a scumbag like that as the electoral asset that it evidently is there. As if a British candidate stood to gain votes from boasting of being related to one of the Moors' Murderers.

That such a melee of mediocrities should be competing for the top job says a lot about the nature and level of public life in the Irish Republic. A state founded by gunmen and now run by gangsters. The ordinary Irish people, who for 725 out of the last 800 years have been our fellow British citizens, surely deserve better.

Some of them are starting to realise as much. In September, whilst the

National Democrat Directorate Elections

In the annual elections to the National Directorate the following people were elected:

Ian Anderson (London)
Simon Darby (West Mids)
Sharron Edwards (West Mids)
Clive Potter (East Mids)
Keith Sharp (East Mids)

They join the following regional Organisers as members of the National Directorate:-

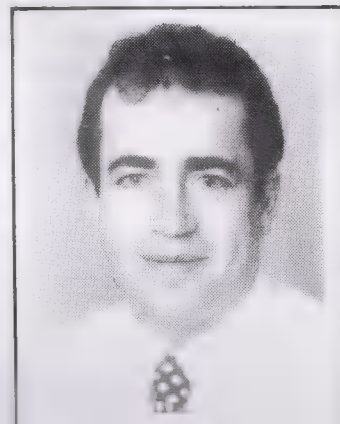

South East Mike Hipperson
South West Gary Needs
Thames Valley Tom Mundy
East Midlands Graham Hardy
West Midlands Steve Edwards
North West Stephen Ebbs

The first meeting of the new Directorate took place on 12th September and the following elections were made:-

Chairman: Ian Anderson
Deputy Chairman: Stephen Ebbs
Branch Liaison: Gary Needs
Elections: Steve Edwards
Information Technology: Simon Darby
Fund Raising: Keith Sharp
Policy: Ian Anderson
Finance & Admin: Stephen Ebbs
Morality: Sharron Edwards
Education & Training: Graham Hardy
Flag Editor: Ian Anderson
Vanguard Editor: Stephen Ebbs
Special Recruitment: Graham Hardy

Clive Potter: from UKIP to National Directorate

Begorrah, I think I'll be standing don't you know.

Irish Presidential candidate MacAleese was also not averse to accepting from the "British Police State" the job of being a non-executive director of Channel Four (though in fairness there is very little British about Channel Four!)

Apart from making a typically republican career of biting the hand that feeds her, MacAleese's other political attitudes can be gauged from the fact that she is a founder member of the Irish Campaign for Homosexual Law Reform. How that will go down with her party's bedrock support base of red-faced peasant farmers from the bogs of rural Ireland remains to be seen. As the candidate of Fianna Fail, the Republic's governing party, her campaign will not be helped by the corruption and bribery scandals breaking round the heads of her Party's leadership. Halfway through her campaign her colleague, Irish Foreign Minister, Ray Burke was ignominiously forced to resign from all public offices for having been involved in a bribery scandal. Whilst former FF Prime Minister and one of those who helped found the Provisional IRA, Charles Haughey is facing possible jail for taking huge bribes from Irish department store magnate Ben Dunne.

Adi Roche, the Labour party Presidential candidate, is at least actually Irish rather than a U.K. citizen. But whilst the Labour Party is less openly Republican than most Irish about this he proudly boasted that he was "a Republican in a Republican country".

Whilst the main Irish Opposition Party, Fine Gael, descended from an earlier IRA splinter group than the ruling Fianna Fail, nominated one Mary Banotti for President. Despite her un-Irish surname Ms. Banotti is the grand-niece of IRA "hero" Michael Collins. Collins' claim to a place in the Republican Hall of Fame is that he was good at murdering British, including Irish, policemen when they were sleeping in their beds. It says a lot for the state of Irish Republic politics that a Presidential candidate should parade her relationship with a scumbag like that as the electoral asset that it evidently is there. As if a British candidate stood to gain votes from boasting of being related to one of the Moors' Murderers.

That such a melee of mediocrities should be competing for the top job says a lot about the nature and level of public life in the Irish Republic. A state founded by gunmen and now run by gangsters. The ordinary Irish people, who for 725 out of the last 800 years have been our fellow British citizens, surely deserve better.

Some of them are starting to realise as much. In September, whilst the sordid scramble for the top job in the breakaway Irish statelet was in full swing, a group of mostly Catholic Southern Irish people, many of them students and University graduates, set up the first openly Irish Unionist political group. The first such since the substantial section of the Irish population who remained loyal to our, and their, country - Britain - was crushed into silence by murder, massacre and ethnic cleansing in the 1920's. Followed by decades of institutionalised discrimination in jobs and education by the Irish state against its loyal British inhabitants.

The Dublin Universities Independent Unionist Association hopes to lead the people of Ireland out of the sordid swamp of separatism into which they have been betrayed back into the bosom of their British motherland. We wish them well. Ireland deserves better than rule by corrupt nonentities resting on a mythology of hatred and murder.

Sharron Edwards (West Mids)
Clive Potter (East Mids)
Keith Sharp (East Mids)

They join the following regional Organisers as members of the National Directorate:-

South East Mike Hipperson
South West Gary Needs
Thames Valley Tom Mundy
East Midlands Graham Hardy
West Midlands Steve Edwards
North West Stephen Ebbs

The first meeting of the new Directorate took place on 12th September and the following elections were made:-

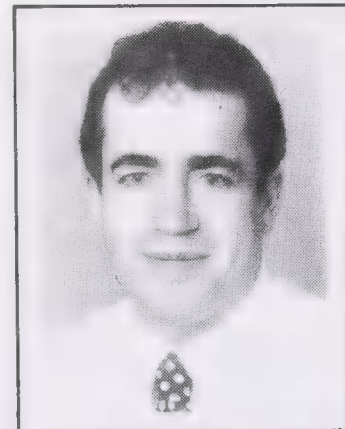

Chairman: Ian Anderson
Deputy Chairman: Stephen Ebbs
Branch Liaison: Gary Needs
Elections: Steve Edwards
Information Technology: Simon Darby
Fund Raising: Keith Sharp
Policy: Ian Anderson
Finance & Admin: Stephen Ebbs
Morality: Sharron Edwards
Education & Training: Graham Hardy
Flag Editor: Ian Anderson
Vanguard Editor: Stephen Ebbs
Special Recruitment: Graham Hardy

The only new member to the Directorate is Clive Potter. Clive is the Leicester Organiser for the party and came to the National Democrats after having been an official of the U.K.I.P.

The position of Information Technology Chairman has now been formalised and Simon Darby was elected to the post as a result of his excellent work in building up the party's Internet operation to the point where the web site is probably the best political web site of any U.K.

Clive Potter: from UKIP to National Directorate

Simon Darby onto the National Executive.

political party.

One or two of the positions on the Directorate have been swapped around with Ian Anderson moving back to Policy, while Graham Hardy takes back Special Recruitment. Steve Edwards has taken over the position of Elections Officer and with local elections next year will have his work cut out.

Yorkshire National Democrats Re-organised and Rearing to go!

IN A MAJOR re-organisation the Yorkshire Branch of the National Democrats has burst back into life. After a period when even the simplest things seemed to go wrong the party has moved with speed to put the branch onto a firmer footing.

As a result East Yorkshire now has a new Organiser in Wayne Thornton who is an ex-fisherman and who feels strongly about the effect that the E.U. has had on this most traditional of British industries.

Wayne has moved quickly to sort out the Branch and has contacted most members in the area and has already given the branch a new sense of direction. Regular activities are now being planned new recruits are already being won.

For now, the branch address is c/o head office and no further mail should be sent to the old Hull P.O. Box. Some mail has gone missing from this box. If any reader has sent any money to this Hull P.O. Box and has not had a response or a receipt for money sent, will they please contact head office (0181-471 6872) as we are asking the police to investigate this unusual occurrence.

Visit Our Web Site

The National Democrat web site on the Internet is one of the best political sites of any U.K. party Regularly up-dated and with quizzes, current events, etc.

The address is:-

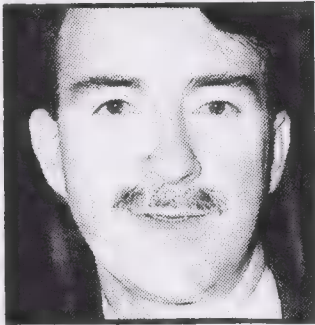

<http://www.netlink.co.uk/users/natdems>

Letters To The Editor

Send To: The Editor,
The Flag, P.O. Box 2269,
London E6 3RF

Mandelson - ex- Communist

Sir,

May I just take this opportunity to remind "Flag" readers of a couple of points that bear repetition.

The pre-revolutionary programme of Communism is defined thus: "To discover what people want; promise it to them; work to get it for them temporarily so that Communists may secure power and take it from them".

In 1973 Peter Mandelson joined the British Communist Party, he is now a minister in the Labour Cabinet.

New labour - old Danger!

GARY CARTWRIGHT, London.

Full of 'Promise' - Let's Give It Our Backing

Sir,

There's a new monthly magazine on Britain's bookshelves that deserves our support. 'Promise' is a 132-page glossy magazine that promotes family values and the Christian ethic within our society.

The publicity material for 'Promise' claims that 'writers for the publication have been selected to portray family life from different angles: enriching our understanding and hopefully inducing a stronger unity and depth to the fabric of our society'.

The magazine is priced at £1.80 and is targeted at mothers aged 25 to 45 who are bringing up children aged 5 to 16. The first issue features an interview with Fiona Castle, widow of TV presenter Roy Castle, and an article on helping children cope with grief. There is also an article entitled 'Is there life before sex?' which interviews eight teenagers aged 14 to 16 - most of who say that they believe sex before marriage is wrong. Editor Linda

Saving The Flag

Sir,

What is the government playing at? I have just witnessed a report on the BBC news about "The British Tourist Board" wanting to remove the Union Flag from their logos as British Airways have recently done.

I ask what is going on? People have fought hard over two centuries for our flag and then these prats want to drop it. Lose the flag and then your national identity and culture. I for one will not bow down to these corrupt dictators from Brussels. Haven't they taken enough already from us; our fishing industry, farming, heritage, etc.

These Euro-prats have taken enough revenge on this once great British Empire and sceptered isle. It is now surely time that Britannia fought back and regained her rights and culture. It is time we showed the world that we are proud to be British and proud of our great past and glories that are so well represented in the red, white and blue.

My view is that if these boards and companies like B.A. are ashamed of the union flag then they should drop the "British" from their names as they don't deserve to live off the great reputation that this conjures up and that is respected all over the world.

Union Flag Forever - Euro Stars Never!!

W. THORNTON, East Yorks.

Change to Front Page

Sir,

I have been subscribing to The Flag for over a year now and am enclosing my subscription renewal. I would like to say how much I enjoy your paper, it seems to keep up a very high standard.

Once or twice I have noticed that the number of spelling and grammatical errors increases but recently this seems to have improved.

I have watched with interest the changes in your main front page heading and I believe the latest changes make it the best so far. I particularly like the change so that the words "Freedom Truth and Justice" stand out - after all that is what we are fighting for. I have kept all my back issues and by placing them side by side you can really see the improvement.

My congratulations to everyone involved in producing this paper. My only complaint now is I wish it were more frequent as I do so look forward to it arriving with the post.

Facts Wrong

Sir,

I would like to correct a few incorrect statements made by the Duke of York recently with regard to his campaign to attract Sikhs into the British Army.

The Duke argued that it was because of their turbans that Sikhs were not allowed to join the Army.

That is only partly true. While a turban or military helmet might be interchanged, it is because of the ceremonial dagger, which has to be worn at all times, that Sikhs are barred entry.

The Duke claimed that Sikhs were great friends to Britain. This has certainly not been the case with the Anglo-Sikh war of the last century being the most bloody and furiously fought in British history. After the First World War there were a series of bloody confrontations which led to widespread carnage and death.

The Duke claimed that there were two and a half million Sikhs in the British Army at the end of the Second World War. The Imperial War Museum puts the number at 750,000.

The Duke claimed that there were 750,000 Sikhs living in Britain today. According to the Office of Population and Census the number is nearly two million.

I, and a great many of my colleagues, would be very much against changing the rules to allow Sikhs into the British Army.

Name and Address Supplied

Real Labour

Sir,

It was obvious from watching the "new" Labour Party Conference that the whole event was a stage managed affair, even more so than the previous Tory conferences. When Tony "Phoney" Blair speaks it is nothing more than an actor's stage performance and not a very good one at that.

The one thing that can't be stage managed is the result from Labour's National Executive elections where Peter Mandelson, Blair's right hand man, failed to get elected and achieved less votes than some members of the loony left including one Ken Livingstone!

Another unplanned part of the Conference was the set of idiotic remarks made by Tony Banks. We all have our opinions on Tory leader William Hague, but to bring up the sensitive issue of abortion to try to raise a laugh is disgraceful. The fact that Blair didn't sack him straight away gives us an idea of things to come.

The Conference made a big thing of the "Homework Club" for children. But there is something going on in the city of Manchester that was not mentioned. With the backing of the Department of Education, the City Council is starting Britain's first "gay" homework club, where pupils will be taught about "sexual health and the history of gay and lesbian culture" (What?!).

Headmasters will be asked to send along children at the age of 14 who feel they might benefit from the club. 'Sick' is the first word that comes into my head and I wonder how far Labour controlled councils across the country are prepared to go. Evening classes for paedophiles? Would that really surprise us if it came about?

Whatever Blair says, we know that 'Old' Labour still rears its ugly head and I live for the day we nationalists kick them out for good and bring some sanity back into our beloved nation.

JAMES PLATTEN, Birmingham

Just Don't Help Them!

Sir,

So now the International red Cross are under pressure to change their symbol because it upsets Muslims in some of the countries where it operates.

The Christian cross apparently incenses some Muslims and this has led to Red Cross workers being attacked by the very people they were meant to be helping.

Rather than change its traditional symbol the Red Cross should just steer

only aid those countries where they are welcome

In 1973 Peter Mandelson joined the British Communist Party: he is now a minister in the Labour Cabinet.

New labour - old Danger!

GARY CARTWRIGHT, London.

Full of 'Promise' - Let's Give It Our Backing

Sir,

There's a new monthly magazine on Britain's bookshelves that deserves our support. 'Promise' is a 132-page glossy magazine that promotes family values and the Christian ethic within our society.

The publicity material for 'Promise' claims that 'writers for the publication have been selected to portray family life from different angles: enriching our understanding and hopefully inducing a stronger unity and depth to the fabric of our society'.

The magazine is priced at £1.80 and is targeted at mothers aged 25 to 45 who are bringing up children aged 5 to 16. The first issue features an interview with Fiona Castle, widow of TV presenter Roy Castle, and an article on helping children cope with grief. There is also an article entitled 'Is there life before sex?' which interviews eight teenagers aged 14 to 16 - most of who say that they believe sex before marriage is wrong. Editor Linda Perham denies the publication is 'religious' but is proud to admit: "You certainly won't find anything in the magazine which would offend Christians".

T. CAMPBELL, Hertfordshire.

My view is that if these boards and companies like B.A. are ashamed of the union flag then they should drop the "British" from their names as they don't deserve to live off the great reputation that this conjures up and that is respected all over the world.

Union Flag Forever - Euro Stars Never!!

W. THORNTON, East Yorks.

Change to Front Page

Sir,

I have been subscribing to The Flag for over a year now and am enclosing my subscription renewal. I would like to say how much I enjoy your paper, it seems to keep up a very high standard.

Once or twice I have noticed that the number of spelling and grammatical errors increases but recently this seems to have improved.

I have watched with interest the changes in your main front page heading and I believe the latest changes make it the best so far. I particularly like the change so that the words "Freedom Truth and Justice" stand out - after all that is what we are fighting for. I have kept all my back issues and by placing them side by side you can really see the improvement.

My congratulations to everyone involved in producing this paper. My only complaint now is I wish it were more frequent as I do so look forward to it arriving with the post.

H. GLOVER, London.

The editor welcomes letters however correspondents are requested to keep these relatively short as space is limited.

"new" Labour Party Conference that the whole event was a stage managed affair, even more so than the previous Tory conferences. When Tony "Phoney" Blair speaks it is nothing more than an actor's stage performance and not a very good one at that.

The one thing that can't be stage managed is the result from Labour's National Executive elections where Peter Mandelson, Blair's right hand man, failed to get elected and achieved less votes than some members of the loony left including one Ken Livingstone!

Another unplanned part of the Conference was the set of idiotic remarks made by Tony Banks. We all have our opinions on Tory leader William Hague, but to bring up the sensitive issue of abortion to try to raise a laugh is disgraceful. The fact that Blair didn't sack him straight away of Manchester that was not mentioned. With the backing of the Department of Education, the City Council is starting Britain's first "gay" homework club, where pupils will be taught about "sexual health and the history of gay and lesbian culture" (What?!).

Headmasters will be asked to send along children at the age of 14 who feel they might benefit from the club. 'Sick' is the first word that comes into my head and I wonder how far Labour controlled councils across the country are prepared to go. Evening classes for paedophiles? Would that really surprise us if it came about?

Whatever Blair says, we know that 'Old' Labour still rears its ugly head and I live for the day we nationalists kick them out for good and bring some sanity back into our beloved nation.

JAMES PLATTEN, Birmingham

Just Don't Help Them!

Sir,

So now the International red Cross are under pressure to change their symbol because it upsets Muslims in some of the countries where it operates.

The Christian cross apparently incenses some Muslims and this has led to Red Cross workers being attacked by the very people they were meant to be helping.

Rather than change its traditional symbol the Red Cross should just steer clear of Muslim countries and should only aid those countries where they are welcome.

BERNARD RADCLIFFE, St Helens, Lancs

ADVERTISING

Advertisements are accepted subject to the discretion of the editor. Rates are as follows:-

Full Page £250 Half Page £150. Quarter Page £100

Double column boxed adverts: 10cm £40; 5cm £25

Single column adverts: 10cm £25; 5cm £15

Homeland

Magazine of South West England National Democrats

Sample copy: £1.00

From: P.O. Box 51,
Exeter, Devon EX2 8AN

Ulster National Democrat Polo Shirts

Blue with Ulster crest and wording on the Breast Sizes: Large & Extra Large
£17.50

From South West National Democrats, P.O. Box 51,
Exeter, Devon EX2 8AN

Wanted

Early Issues of The Flag and Vanguard
by collector

Please write with details to P. Collins

The Flag, P.O. Box 2269,
London E6 3RF

Your Advert could be here for just £15

YOUR NEAREST BRANCH

LONDON

0181-471 6872

P.O. Box 2269, London E6 3RF.

Branches: East London & Essex, North London.

WEST MIDLANDS

01902-892769

P.O. Box 89, Cannock, Staffs WS12 4YZ.

Branches: Dudley, South Staffs, Wolverhampton, Birmingham

THAMES VALLEY

P.O. Box 2269, London E6 3RF.

Branches: Slough, Reading

SOUTH WEST ENGLAND

01392-424098

P.O. Box 51, Exeter, Devon EX2 8AN

Branches: Exeter, Plymouth, Torbay.

EAST MIDLANDS

P.O. BOX 214, Derby, Derbyshire DE1 9HA.

Branches: Derby, Northampton, Burton on Trent,
Leicester, P.O. Box 1052, Leicester LE2 1YR.

YORKSHIRE & HUMBERSIDE

c/o P.O. Box 2269, London E6 3RF (being changed now)

Branches: East Yorkshire, W. Yorkshire, Grimsby.

NORTH WEST ENGLAND

01254-664626

P.O. Box 89, Blackburn, Lancashire BB2 7FW.

Branches: Blackburn, Liverpool, Wirral, Southport

NORTHERN IRELAND

P.O. box 25, Coleraine, N. Ireland BT51 3RX.

Branches: Coleraine, Belfast

If there is no branch near you but you would like to be put in touch with other members nearby please phone head office and we will check our records. This service is available to National Democrat members only.

Facts Wrong

Sir,
I would like to correct a few incorrect statements made by the Duke of York recently with regard to his campaign to attract Sikhs into the British Army.

The Duke argued that it was because of their turbans that Sikhs were not allowed to join the Army.

That is only partly true. While a turban or military helmet might be interchanged, it is because of the ceremonial dagger, which has to be worn at all times, that Sikhs are barred entry.

The Duke claimed that Sikhs were great friends to Britain. This has certainly not been the case with the Anglo-Sikh war of the last century being the most bloody and furiously fought in British history. After the First World War there were a series of bloody confrontations which led to widespread carnage and death.

The Duke claimed that there were two and a half million Sikhs in the British Army at the end of the Second World War. The Imperial War Museum puts the number at 750,000.

The Duke claimed that there were 750,000 Sikhs living in Britain today. According to the Office of Population and Census the number is nearly two million.

I, and a great many of my colleagues, would be very much against changing the rules to allow Sikhs into the British Army.

Name and Address Supplied

Real Labour

Sir,
It was obvious from watching the "new" Labour Party Conference that the whole event was a stage managed affair, even more so than the previous Tory conferences. When Tony "Phoney" Blair speaks it is nothing more than an actor's stage performance and not a very good one at that.

The one thing that can't be stage managed is the result from Labour's National Executive elections where Peter Mandelson, Blair's right hand man, failed to get elected and achieved less votes than some members of the loony left including one Ken Livingstone!

Another unplanned part of the Conference was the set of idiotic remarks made by Tony Banks. We all have our opinions on Tory leader William Hague, but to bring up the sensitive issue of abortion to try to raise a laugh is disgraceful. The fact that Blair didn't sack him straight away gives us an idea of things to come.

The Conference made a big thing of the "Homework Club" for children. But there is something going on in the city of Manchester that was not mentioned. With the backing of the Department of Education, the City Council is starting Britain's first "gay" homework club, where pupils will be taught about "sexual health and the history of gay and lesbian culture" (What?!).

Headmasters will be asked to send along children at the age of 14 who feel they might benefit from the club. 'Sick' is the first word that comes into my head and I wonder how far Labour controlled councils across the country are prepared to go. Evening classes for paedophiles? Would that really surprise us if it came about?

Whatever Blair says, we know that 'Old' Labour still rears its ugly head and I live for the day we nationalists kick them out for good and bring some sanity back into our beloved nation.

JAMES PLATTEN, Birmingham

Just Don't Help Them!

Sir,
So now the International red Cross are under pressure to change their symbol because it upsets Muslims in some of the countries where it operates.

The Christian cross apparently incenses some Muslims and this has led to Red Cross workers being attacked by the very people they were meant to be helping.

Rather than change its traditional only aid those countries where they are

FREEDOM BOOKS

BCM Newpat, London WC1N 3XX

TOP QUALITY TIES

TOP QUALITY TIES BOTH WITH DARK BLUE BACKGROUND

1. Union Jack Tie: Diagonal stripes of small union jack flags £9.95
2. Britannia Tie: has motif and thin red and white diagonal stripes £9.95

SMALL METAL BADGES

1. Union Jack badge..... £1.75
2. England St. George's Flag badge..... £1.75
3. National Democrat badge (for members only) £2.50

CASSETTE TAPES

1. The Scottish Regiments..... £3.99
2. Wartime Memories (songs of WW2)..... £3.99
3. Music of the Streets (traditional songs)..... £6.99
4. Traditional Songs of Scotland..... £6.99

ART POSTERS

new" Labour Party Conference that the whole event was a stage managed affair, even more so than the previous Tory conferences. When Tony "Phoney" Blair speaks it is nothing more than an actor's stage performance and not a very good one at that.

The one thing that can't be stage managed is the result from Labour's National Executive elections where Peter Mandelson, Blair's right hand man, failed to get elected and achieved less votes than some members of the party left including one Ken Livingstone!

Another unplanned part of the Conference was the set of idiotic remarks made by Tony Banks. We all have our opinions on Tory leader William Hague, but to bring up the sensitive issue of abortion to try to raise a laugh is disgraceful. The fact that Blair didn't sack him straight away there is something going on in the city of Manchester that was not mentioned. With the backing of the Department of Education, the City Council is starting Britain's first "gay" homework club, where pupils will be taught about "sexual health and the history of gay and lesbian culture" (What?!).

Headmasters will be asked to send along children at the age of 14 who feel they might benefit from the club. 'Sick' is the first word that comes into my head and I wonder how far Labour controlled councils across the country are prepared to go. Evening classes for paedophiles? Would that really surprise us if it came about?

Whatever Blair says, we know that 'Old' Labour still rears its ugly head and I live for the day we nationalists kick them out for good and bring some sanity back into our beloved nation.

JAMES PLATTEN, Birmingham

Just Don't Help Them!

Sir,

So now the International red Cross are under pressure to change their symbol because it upsets Muslims in some of the countries where it operates.

The Christian cross apparently incenses some Muslims and this has led to Red Cross workers being attacked by the very people they were meant to be helping.

Rather than change its traditional symbol the Red Cross should just steer clear of Muslim countries and should only aid those countries where they are welcome.

BERNARD RADCLIFFE, St Helens, Lancs

YOUR NEAREST BRANCH

LONDON

0181-471 6872

P.O. Box 2269, London E6 3RF.

Branches: East London & Essex, North London.

WEST MIDLANDS

01902-892769

P.O. Box 89, Cannock, Staffs WS12 4YZ.

Branches: Dudley, South Staffs, Wolverhampton, Birmingham

THAMES VALLEY

P.O. Box 2269, London E6 3RF.

Branches: Slough, Reading

SOUTH WEST ENGLAND

01392-424098

P.O. Box 51, Exeter, Devon EX2 8AN

Branches: Exeter, Plymouth, Torbay.

EAST MIDLANDS

P.O. BOX 214, Derby, Derbyshire DE1 9HA.

Branches: Derby, Northampton, Burton on Trent,

Leicester, P.O. Box 1052, Leicester LE2 1YR.

YORKSHIRE & HUMBERSIDE

c/o P.O. Box 2269, London E6 3RF (being changed now)

Branches: East Yorkshire, W. Yorkshire, Grimsby.

NORTH WEST ENGLAND

01254-664626

P.O. Box 89, Blackburn, Lancashire BB2 7FW.

Branches: Blackburn, Liverpool, Wirral, Southport

NORTHERN IRELAND

P.O. box 25, Coleraine, N. Ireland BT51 3RX.

Branches: Coleraine, Belfast

If there is no branch near you but you would like to be put in touch with other members nearby please phone head office and we will check our records. This service is available to National Democrat members only.

SMALL METAL BADGES

1. Union Jack badge..... £1.75
2. England St. George's Flag badge..... £1.75
3. National Democrat badge (for members only) £2.50

CASSETTE TAPES

1. The Scottish Regiments.....£3.99
2. Wartime Memories (songs of WW2)..... £3.99
3. Music of the Streets (traditional songs)..... £6.99
4. Traditional Songs of Scotland..... £6.99

ART POSTERS

1. The Haywain (Constable)
2. Salisbury Cathedral from the Meadows

Full size art posters (approx 60" x 72")
In full colour on heavyweight art paper

£15.00 each including post and packing

FARMING FOCUS

Britain's Hill Farms Face Extinction

THE FUTURE of many family-run upland farms in northern Britain is in doubt. A report by the National farmer's union shows that 43% of hill farmers with children believe that the next generation would not be taking over the farm.

Three-quarters of those polled blamed low annual income for their youngsters not wanting to enter upland farming leaving the local communities facing a bleak future.

The Lake District is an invaluable environmental asset with much of its character a direct result of farming but without hill farming much of its attraction will be lost.

Cumberland hill farmer Thomas Teasdale gives an insight into the sort of life he has faced since he took up farming on Embleton Common in 1972.

"Hill farming is a lonely business. It gives you no respite for illness or holidays. The cows don't always calve themselves and sheep need to be checked, fed and watered."

"It costs twice as much to go away as everyone else because we have to pay someone to come in and look after the farm."

The lack of financial reward for all the hard work led Thomas Teasdale's two sons to look to industry and insurance for their careers. Their father has struggled on even after the bottom fell out of the sheep market but it has pushed his commitment to the limit.

The future for the hill farm can be made secure if the government has the will to help the hill farmer. Thomas Teasdale has already thrown down the gauntlet and is fighting for his future by diversifying into pigs and poultry as well as providing a bed and breakfast service for the ever-increasing number of tourists in the area.

But hill farming is about sheep and until sheep subsidies are substantially raised, which is the only way to enable farmers to pass on a family sustaining inheritance to

"Flogging Is Bearable" Says Flogger

A COLD BUCKETFUL OF COMMON SENSE has been poured over the media frenzy about the British nurses sentenced to be flogged in Saudi Arabia - by the last Briton to be flogged there. He says that their laws are "harsh but fair", that everyone going to Saudi knows the score about them before they go, and that if they don't like the Saudi system they don't have to work there.

In 1994 Andrew Smith, one of thousands of well-paid British expatriates working in Saudi Arabia, was caught carrying alcohol in a water bottle and sentenced to 38 lashes. He says he was allowed to wear a thick jumper and that "although the flogging hurt, it was bearable and there was no blood". The Saudis gave him a cup of tea afterwards and even offered to show him round their local gold mine!

Mr Smith doesn't hold a grudge. Today he says the system is "harsh but fair". Of the Saudis he says: "They have rules and they tell you them before you go there. If you break them and get caught, you get punished. It may be a bit barbaric to us, but if you don't like it, don't go!"

To the media hacks sniping at Saudi Arabia Mr Smith's reply is straight to the point "If you haven't even been to the country, you shouldn't criticise it". Which would apply just as well to all bleeding-heart liberal 'human rights' meddlers prone to sticking their fingers into other countries' pies!

Mr Smith's blunt common-sense is surely right. Nationalism is about respecting the identities and cultures of other countries as well as our own.

Celebrating 120 years Of Steel Rail Making

WITH SO much of Britain's finest industrial prowess having gone to the wall over the last thirty years it is heartening to report on one specialised industry that has survived and prospered in a far flung corner of England.

The West Cumbrian town of Workington has reached a milestone that no other British manufacturing centre is likely to emulate. Workington has, for the last 120 took up farming on Embleton Common in 1972.

"Hill farming is a lonely business. It gives you no respite for illness or holidays. The cows don't always calve themselves and sheep need to be checked, fed and watered."

"It costs twice as much to go away as everyone else because we have to pay someone to come in and look after the farm."

The lack of financial reward for all the hard work led Thomas Teasdale's two sons to look to industry and insurance for their careers. Their father has struggled on even after the bottom fell out of the sheep market but it has pushed his commitment to the limit.

The future for the hill farm can be made secure if the government has the will to help the hill farmer. Thomas Teasdale has already thrown down the gauntlet and is fighting for his future by diversifying into pigs and poultry as well as providing a bed and breakfast service for the ever-increasing number of tourists in the area.

But hill farming is about sheep and until sheep subsidies are substantially raised, which is the only way to enable farmers to pass on a family sustaining inheritance to their children, the future looks very bleak.

Scottish Soldiers Get No Justice

Following intervention by the New Labour Government the two Scots Guardsmen currently held in jail in Northern Ireland will have to wait still longer for justice.

Jim Fisher, from Ayr and Mark Wright, from Arbroath have been in custody since 1992 after an incident when a man was shot after being challenged at a road block.

At the time there was great tension in the area and one of their own company had been killed by a sniper just a few days earlier.

The two men both had impeccable records, but were convicted by a Diplock Court with no jury.

Despite several reviews their fate is now seen by the Government as part of the Sinn Fein/IRA appeasement process - and so two brave, courageous soldiers who have been prepared to lay down the lives to protect us all continue to languish in jail.

General naylor siad: There is no just reason to keep these men in prison any longer....Natural justice argues for their immediate release".

A COLD BUCKETFUL OF COMMON SENSE has been poured over the media frenzy about the British nurses sentenced to be flogged in Saudi Arabia - by the last Briton to be flogged there. He says that their laws are "harsh but fair", that everyone going to Saudi knows the score about them before they go, and that if they don't like the Saudi system they don't have to work there.

In 1994 Andrew Smith, one of thousands of well-paid British expatriates working in Saudi Arabia, was caught carrying alcohol in a water bottle and sentenced to 38 lashes. He says he was allowed to wear a thick jumper and that "although the flogging hurt, it was bearable and there was no blood". The Saudis gave him a cup of tea afterwards and even offered to show him round their local gold mine!

Mr Smith doesn't hold a grudge. Today he says the system is "harsh but fair". Of the Saudis he says: "They have rules and they tell you

them before you go there. If you break them and get caught, you get punished. It may be a bit barbaric to us, but if you don't like it, don't go!"

To the media hacks sniping at Saudi Arabia Mr Smith's reply is straight to the point "If you haven't even been to the country, you shouldn't criticise it". Which would apply just as well to all bleeding-heart liberal 'human rights' meddlers prone to sticking their fingers into other countries' pies!

Mr Smith's blunt common-sense is surely right. Nationalism is about respecting the identities and cultures of other countries as well as our own.

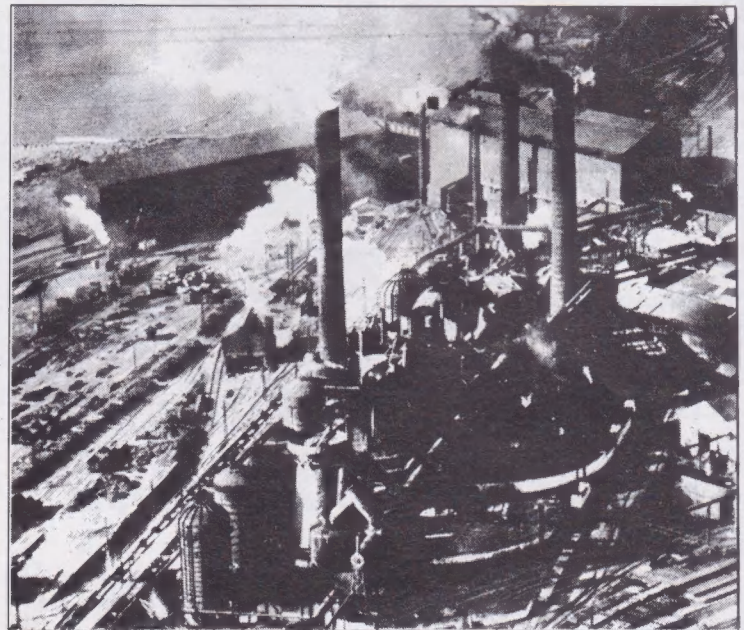

Celebrating 120 years Of Steel Rail Making

WITH SO much of Britain's finest industrial prowess having gone to the wall over the last thirty years it is heartening to report on one specialised industry that has survived and prospered in a far flung corner of England.

The West Cumbrian town of Workington has reached a milestone that no other British manufacturing centre is likely to emulate. Workington has, for the last 120 years, continuously produced steel railway lines.

Steel rail-making has been the lifeblood of the West Cumbrian economy for five generations, turning steel ingots into rail track on which railway companies across the world rely. As well as steel rails the company makes steel sleepers and fishplates of which over half go for export.

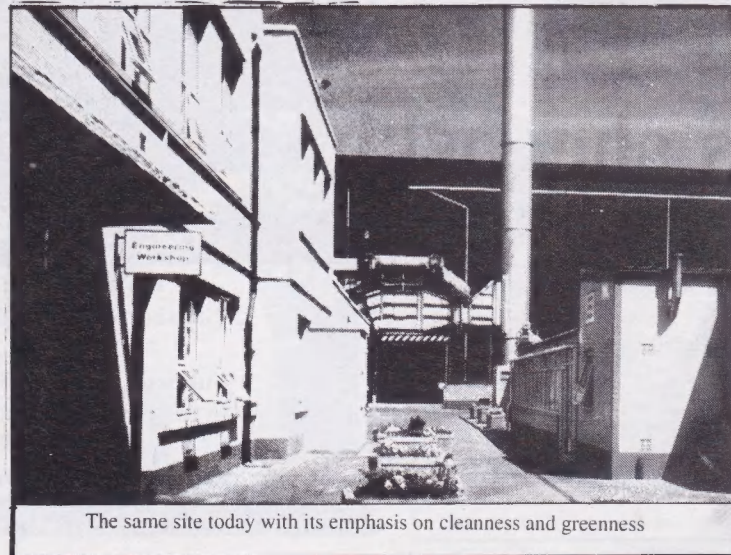

Steel replaced iron in rail manufacture in the 1860's and the West Cumberland Hematite Iron and Steel Company first put Workington's steel rail-making skills on the map in 1877. By 1977 when the nationalised British Steel Corporation celebrated 100 years of rail-making in the town, Workington's Moss Bay

Workington Iron and Steel Company, Moss Bay in 1935 - a by-word for pollution

Works was Britain's sole track products plant.

British Steel spokesman Christopher Albon believes that meeting the greater environmental demands of the public has been a key factor in making the company a popular employer in the town.

The same site today with its emphasis on cleanness and greenness

"We're proud to be going strong after 120 years and very proud of our environmental improvements. Many potential buyers visit the plant and are impressed by the environmental work we have done. We find that being green provides a good selling focus".

Over the last ten years the Moss Bay plant has been transformed with gardened and landscaped areas drastically changing the view of the works that faces the town. So dramatic has been the change that British Steel has been presented with a British Standard 7750 for its safeguarding of the environment.

What a great example British Steel's rail-making plant is to other manufacturing industries in Britain. It has provided the industrial outpost of Workington with work for its population for the last 120 years, as well as making great efforts to improve the environment in which its workforce lives.

g Is Bearable" Says Flogged Man

OF COMMON SENSE has been frenzy about the British nurses
in Saudi Arabia - by the last Briton says that their laws are "harsh but to Saudi knows the score about that if they don't like the Saudi to work there.

of pa-was ter
He
ick ogere was no blood". The Saudis gave him a cup of tea afterwards and even offered to show him round their local gold mine!

Mr Smith doesn't hold a grudge.
Today he says the system is "harsh but fair". Of the Saudis he says:
"They have rules and they tell you

them before you go there. If you break them and get caught, you get punished. It may be a bit barbaric to us, but if you don't like it, don't go!"

To the media hacks sniping at Saudi Arabia Mr Smith's reply is straight to the point "If you haven't even been to the country, you shouldn't criticise it". Which would apply just as well to all bleeding-heart liberal 'human rights' meddlers prone to sticking their fingers
into other countries' pies!

Mr Smith's blunt common-sense
is surely right. Nationalism is about respecting the identities and cultures
of other countries as well as our own.

If the people of Saudi Arabia or anywhere else want to live under their own laws and according to their own customs then - as long as they don't try to impose them on us - that is their business and they have every right to do so. Just as we have every right to govern our internal affairs
and way of life as we wish. If people go to live in other peoples' countries they must expect to abide by the local laws and respect the local customs and culture. Especially if they are well paid to live there, as British expatriates are in Saudi Arabia. After all, that's what we expect
of foreigners visiting our country.

How the EU supports our Fishermen?

This is the title of a chapter in what is called a "classroom guide to the European Union". You will be reassured to know the following:-
"The Common Fisheries Policy
(CFP) has been in operation since 1983 and looks at the ways of conserving and managing the various fish stocks in EU waters (sic). This includes measures to protect species from overfishing, guarantees fishermen their future livelihood and regular supplies of fish at reasonable prices. Many coastal communities feel that fishing should remain an independent activity with no restrictions from Governments or the E.U. But this does not take into account economic realities: stocks face the constant dangers of being overfished and every year EU governments fix quotas to conserve stocks. The E.U. may designate protected areas where the right to fish is restricted or banned, set ceilings on catches, fix the number and type of vessels that may fish particular grounds and determine the type of fishing gear used."

Gosh aren't we lucky to have such a kind, thoughtful Euro government to protect us all from those nasty evil fishermen who want to earn a living and provide for their families. Stalin would be proud.

"Gypsies" "Tramps" or "Thieves"

The latest immigration fiasco with gypsies being played out in Dover is not a total surprise. Back in August one newspaper exposed a gang of child pickpockets
operating in Britain, mainly near to prime tourist sites. Their names
were: Delila Ajnuri, Samira
Osmanovic, Safet Hadic, Yasmina
Akic, Bisian Havdic, etc. etc.

Yes, you've guessed it - these are all gypsies on holiday in Britain.
Obviously word on the gypsy
grapevine has gone around Europe
and now they are all flocking here.

120 years Of Steel Rail Making

Articles for publication are always welcome; ideally they should be typed with double spacing and sent to The Editor,
The Flag, P.O. Box 2269,
London E6 3RF

Subscribe to 'The FLAG'

"Sign of a Nation great and strong."

OF COMMON SENSE has been
frenzy about the British nurses
in Saudi Arabia - by the last Briton
says that their laws are "harsh but g to Saudi knows the score about d that if they don't like the Saudi
to work there.

was no blood". The Saudis gave him
a cup of tea afterwards and even offered to show him round their local
gold mine!

Mr Smith doesn't hold a grudge.
Today he says the system is "harsh
but fair". Of the Saudis he says:
"They have rules and they tell you

them before you go there. If you break them and get caught, you get punished. It may be a bit barbaric to us, but if you don't like it, don't go!"

To the media hacks sniping at Saudi Arabia Mr Smith's reply is straight to the point "If you haven't even been to the country, you shouldn't criticise it". Which would apply just as well to all bleeding-
heart liberal 'human rights' med-
dlers prone to sticking their fingers
into other countries' pies!

Mr Smith's blunt common-sense
is surely right. Nationalism is about respecting the identities and cultures
of other countries as well as our own.

If the people of Saudi Arabia or anywhere else want to live under their
own laws and according to their own
customs then - as long as they don't
try to impose them on us - that is their business and they have every right to do so. Just as we have every right to govern our internal affairs
and way of life as we wish. If people go to live in other peoples' countries they must expect to abide by the local laws and respect the local customs and culture. Especially if they are well paid to live there, as British expatriates are in Saudi Arabia. After all, that's what we expect
of foreigners visiting our country.

such a kind, thoughtful Euro government to protect us all from
those nasty evil fishermen who want to earn a living and provide for their families. Stalin would be proud.

"Gypsies" "Tramps" or "Thieves"

The latest immigration fiasco with gypsies being played out in Dover
is not a total surprise. Back in August one newspaper exposed a
gang of child pickpockets
operating in Britain, mainly near
to prime tourist sites. Their names
were: Delila Ajnuri, Samira
Osmanovic, Safet Hadic, Yasmina
Akic, Bisian Havidic, etc. etc.

Yes, you've guessed it - these are
all gypsies on holiday in Britain.
Obviously word on the gypsy
grapevine has gone around Europe
and now they are all flocking here.

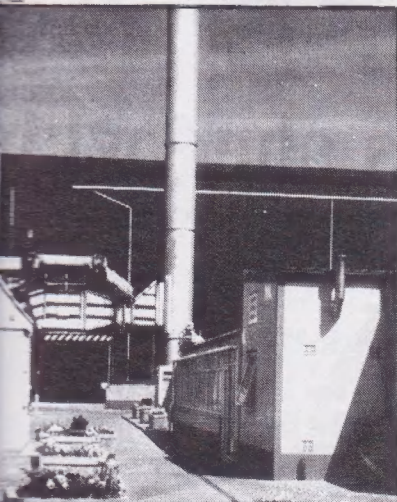

120 years Of Steel Rail Making

Workington Iron and Steel Company, Moss Bay in 1935 - a by-word for pollution

Works was Britain's sole track products plant.

British Steel spokesman Christopher Albon believes that meeting the greater environmental demands of the public has been a key factor in making the company a popular employer in the town.

emphasis on cleanness and greenness

"We're proud to be going strong after 120 years and very proud of our environmental improvements. Many potential buyers visit the plant and are impressed by the environmental work we have done. We find that being green provides a good selling focus".

Over the last ten years the Moss Bay plant has been transformed with gardened and landscaped areas drastically changing the view of the works that faces the town. So dramatic has been the change that British Steel has been presented with a British Standard 7750 for its safeguarding of the environment.

What a great example British Steel's rail-making plant is to other manufacturing industries in Britain.
It has provided the industrial outpost of Workington with work for its population for the last 120 years, as well as making great efforts to improve the environment in which its workforce lives.

Articles for publication are always welcome; ideally they should be typed with double spacing and sent to The Editor,
The Flag, P.O. Box 2269,
London E6 3RF

Subscribe to 'The FLAG'

*"Sign of a Nation great and strong,
To ward her people from foreign wrong;
Pride and glory and honour - all,
Live in the colours to stand and fall!"*

Please find enclosed my subscription of £16.00 for two copies of the next 12 issues of
The FLAG.

Cheques/Postal Orders made payable to 'The FLAG'. Overseas subscriptions £26.00 for one copy AIR MAIL.

NAME

ADDRESS

.....
Please return this form together with your remittance to : The Secretary, P.O.Box 2269,
London E6 3RF.

• There is a special subscription rate for members of the National Democrats only: United Kingdom £14.00: Overseas £24.00.